Targets that exist everywhere

a strategic proposal for building a common front against the profiteers of war and repression
Targets that exist everywhere – a strategic proposal for building a common front against the profiteers of war and repression

Rapidly, time marches on; we are already in the 2nd year of the Covid-19 state of emergency and, knowing that no power will ever voluntarily relinquish its new mechanisms of control, anarchist and other libertarian movements all over the globe are looking for strategies and practical means against it. In some regions, social tensions have recently erupted into riots. Elsewhere, there are short-lived outbreaks known as Corona Riots. As anarchists, we are often surprised by the dynamics, sometimes finding ourselves in the crowd of the street battles or perplexed as spectators on the sidelines. Almost every state deals with us, small groups or individuals, sabotaging, agitating and roaming restless in the cities.

With the desire to finally cross the threshold from symbolic resistance to material damage to the enemy infrastructure and their tools of power. In addition to the direct confrontation with the pigs, it seems necessary to identify and disconcert the individual cogs of their machine. There is no other way to overcome the balance of power; metropolises, which in recent years have been more frequently devastated by social struggles, general strikes and riots, have relatively quickly recovered with their arrogance. But we are still too often sliding into randomness instead of tearing apart the weaker links in the chain of oppression and their profiteers.

Curfews, police killings, gentrification, ecological terrorism, war against the own population and against foreign countries - the system gives us daily occasions to look for targets whose continuous destruction may at some point be more than a figure in the balance sheet or a report in the press. In many urban centers, traditional forms of action have emerged over the years which, beyond their local justification, could be evaluated from the point of view, how the new anarchist urban guerrilla can relate to each other in order to overcome the borders of capital, which capital has never been bound.

In Santiago, the buses of the transport companies burn for almost every occasion, in Athens it is ATMs, in the French banlieues almost all cars but also again and again those of certain companies. In Berlin, company cars or posh cars are torched for almost every occasion as well. Throughout Europe, antenna masts and relay stations of communications providers go up in flames.
What would be the impact if attacks on specific targets were intensified? We know the damage of destroyed data lines and burned cell towers, but such attacks cannot be repeated everywhere at will. Our enemies' vehicle fleets are also harder to access than we would like.

Some facilities are well secured in big cities but unguarded in small towns. Nevertheless, there are still enough known and less known targets standing around. And who actually supplies the equipment to the police and military? Who builds what? Who works with the supply companies or hides behind a consortium of companies? Who is guarding this all?

The market is constantly in motion, big companies swallow up their competitors, hide behind other names, outsource certain activities. They collect our data and face us with their logos everywhere in the city, which they consider to be their property.

Because it should not be enough for us to follow the waves of uprisings going around the world from a distance and to look for suitable solidarity actions for them each time anew, we propose to collect information about the enemies of freedom and to spread them in such a way that it becomes known everywhere. This means to use not only the publications of the militant scene but all means, such as graffiti, posters, video rallies and other accessible media to denounce these actors of capitalist barbarism.

In order to then attack them worldwide, whether in campaigns or out of the blue and without apparent cause. In this way, it could be tried out whether companies avoid certain regions or certain orders because the damage would be too great. This would be a strategic line already developed in Europe-wide acts of sabotage against the oil and gas company Shell in the late 1980s to mid-1990s, thereby showing solidarity with the resistance of the Ogoni in Nigeria, among others.

Or, if the need arises to do something against justice in a particular country and it is determined that appropriate institutions are difficult to hit, why not attack the private prison operator Sodexo, even where it hides behind the name GA Tec?

With an increased continuity of our interventions and a focus on global players, the response times of authorities and the delivery times of goods and information could be extended from a certain degree. Which will open up new spaces for other attacks. This proposal is not intended as a substitute for participation in or provocation of riots, and it does not oppose the spontaneous and chaotic attack on other targets.
This booklet contains responsibility claims of attacks that meet these criteria. In order to be able to intervene in any conflict in any place, they spread suggestions about targets and those responsible for dividing this world among themselves. Attached you will find an organizing proposal on revolutionary violence from Greece.

So then, fire at the enemies of freedom!
Ring: Amazon’s connected police bells

How Amazon is helping the U.S. police build a huge video surveillance network

Connected doorbells from Amazon-owned Ring are a big hit. But they are also helping to build a nationwide video surveillance system, funded by the citizens themselves.

Will the United States soon rival China in video surveillance? While the Beijing government has installed 600 million cameras across the country, the U.S. authorities can rely on the citizens themselves. In three years, the company Ring, an Amazon subsidiary specializing in the sale of connected doorbells equipped with cameras, has considerably increased the amount of video data available to the police.

According to the scum media (owned by Jeff Bezos, overlord of Amazon), more than 2,000 local police and fire departments have partnered with Ring in the United States. The number of partnerships stood at 703 in 2019, and only 60 in 2018. Estimates tare made that Amazon is now forging two new partnerships every day.

In early 2019 images were published of the software Ring makes available to authorities. Without a warrant, cops can demand any user – sometimes with financial incentives – within 400 meters of a suspected crime to access video surveillance footage from their connected doorbell. Up to 12 hours of recording can be collected by the police and kept without time limit.

If the network of cameras made available to the American cops is for the moment much smaller than the Chinese surveillance system, it already incorporates many devices, in fact financed by the Americans themselves – Ring connected doorbells are sold in France from 99 euros. The American scum mainstream media quotes a study by the technocrats of MIT that mentions the figure of three million active Ring cameras in the United States.

It is estimated that 47 French cities with more than 90,000 inhabitants had a total of 11,400 surveillance cameras in early 2020. In the United States, Amazon distinguishes itself from Google, which offers competing products – via its Nest range – but without working with the police [should we take their word for it?] In France, no such partnership has been announced between Ring and the authorities. A collaboration that could be complex to implement because of European law, which is more protective of privacy.

*A re-post (slightly edited) of this informative post from Sans Nom, even though it is referring to Ring in a French context it is important for a UK context because of the increased use of the door cameras which are not subject to EU law anymore and could or are already being used in the same way as in the US.
Amazon Van Torched in Los Angeles

For autonomous, decentralized May Day 2020, we torched an Amazon van in Los Angeles County. We could not sit idly by and watch the spread of COVID-19 turn ICE detention centers into full blown death camps

Amazon provides the cloud servers that hosts the Investigative Case Management system, the database utilized by ICE and other Federal agencies to compile public and private data to track and deport immigrants. Amazon plays a role in every raid; every family separation; and every death at the hands of ICE. It was the goal of this action to raise the stakes for companies like Amazon that provide critical border enforcement infrastructure.

In solidarity with with migrants currently on hunger strike in ICE facilities throughout the country. In solidarity with warehouse and grocery workers engaging in wildcat strikes on May Day.

Amazon Vans Burned in Solidarity with Terra Incognita and Liebig34 in Berlin

No matter which color a government has and which territory it controls, they begin to clear the few spaces in the cities which grew in the hope of another life. Squats and non-commercial areas, which tried to exist against state violence and the racist mood in society, come under pressure.

By supporting the international call of Terra Incognita - who got recently evicted in Thessaloniki, Greece- for an action-month in October and the decision to choose ourselves when to act in order to defend Liebig34 and not to wait until the state’s agenda decides when to evict one of our ventures, on the morning of October 6, we set on fire two vans of Amazon in Berlin-Neukölln as a message of solidarity with Liebig34, Terra Incognita and other collectives who support their calls.

Amazon is a winner of Corona because they deliver more when people stay at home. They deliver with inhuman conditions to their workers. They collect every kind of data to sell it to other capitalist institutions; they share this data with police and establish more surveilance. Amazon is changing cities: in Berlin-Friedrichshain, where Liebig34 has to leave, they built a huge tower. More offices, more expansive flats for their employes, more upgrading of the neighborhood. That’s why Amazon recived already many blows, in Berlin and also in US.
We stand in solidarity with the comrades of Terra Incognita and support their decision to keep the collective and continue fighting against the state, the capital and our oppressors. Every eviction has its price and we will not remain silent in the face of these continuous state’s attacks of this coordinated repression-operations all over the world, on our ventures and on the people of the struggle. They may take our houses but the nights belong to small groups and their will to sabotage the power.

Destroy the city of the rich and attack the state’s infrastructures before and after every Day X. Defend Liebig34 and Terra Incognita!

Support the international call on October 30-November 1

Achim/Germany: Incendiary Sabotage of an Amazon Construction Site

Amazon construction site sabotaged!

At the end of last year, Amazon concluded the purchase contract for a commercial site on the A27 motorway in Achim. Anyone who goes there now will see huge cranes and other heavy equipment towering up into the air, pounding a gigantic hall of steel and concrete out of the ground. In the future, 2,000 people will be working under constant surveillance in a windowless hall in a place that was a wasteland just a short time ago, only to be replaced by robots. Employment offices are rubbing their hands that they can force masses of people to work at Amazon.

The new logistics centre is important for Amazon, so that, together with the much smaller distribution centre in Bremerhaven, it can supply the Bremen/Oldenburg/Bremerhaven area more quickly. The state of Lower Saxony is bearing the costs of transport connections and other infrastructure, thus joining the degrading practice by which cities and local authorities around the world outdo each other in giving gifts to the company.

We have decided that the construction will not go off without a hitch. In the early morning hours of July 30, 2020, we lit a fire on the construction site with 20 liters of a mixture of gasoline and diesel and several incendiary devices and set fire to a 40-meter-high crane. Instead of surrendering to the seemingly inevitable, we decided to become an incalculable risk to cybernetic capital in the blind spots of the Bau-Watch cameras with their piercing green light and outside the gaze of the securities who have to guard this construction site day and night.

Monitoring and technological access

Rule, surveillance and the exploitation of people are increasingly organized by the intervention of large corporations. Their digital networks, algorithms and technologies have become indispensable and permeate all areas of our lives. They influence our lives, our everyday life, our feelings, our thinking, our communication and our social relationships. The technological attack thus also targets everything that has so far resisted capitalist exploitation. A dystopia that is striving towards its completion: Infinite amounts of data are collected, selected, evaluated and analyzed, guaranteeing a complete insight into social and societal processes in real time. These are to be controlled in order to be able to predict developments and (in)regularities. Small changes and shocks in the fragile economic market can affect one’s own supremacy in the race for the greatest profit.

The current technological development paves the way for a smartification of the whole life. The economic success of IT giants such as Amazon, Apple, Google, Facebook & Co. naturally includes the optimization of wage exploitation. At the same time, algorithm-based crime prevention promises smooth governance and rule and administration, usually in a completely invisible, decentralised and even environmentally conscious outfit. Here are some examples.

Healthcare market and human technology

Amazon is spreading to all markets and into all areas of life. Investments in the so-called Share-Economy run parallel to the establishment of a health insurance company. The entry into the health market was and is promising.

More favourable tariffs or bonuses for insured persons serve here as an incentive to reveal as much as possible (e.g. via a Smart Watch) about themselves and their behaviour. Information on blood sugar levels, the number of steps per day and alcohol levels is passed on directly to the health insurance company via digital devices. Smokers, for example, will have to pay a higher health insurance premium. Everyone is responsible for their own health. The solidarity principle of health insurance companies is thus completely undermined. Business in the health sector is now the second largest source of income for Amazon.

Crime “prevention”

Amazon’s facial recognition software “Recognition” is a racist and unreliable surveillance technology, used in particular by the US police. In practice, especially with BPOC (Black People of Color), the results are often falsified, with the consequence that they are criminalized, i.e. controlled, arrested or imprisoned much more often. In the USA, more than a thousand police stations have a partnership with the Amazon corporation and use its surveillance technologies. In Germany, the use of facial recognition systems was initially suspended due to technical problems and data protection hurdles and its use by the police was postponed for another year. In the USA, additional police stations enter into partnerships with Amazon on a weekly basis.

If we want to fight the technological attack, we must sabotage ourselves!

A disempowerment or even socialization of the big tech companies and global players like Amazon, Apple, Facebook or Google seems hardly possible. We think it is wrong to reform or make these companies “socially acceptable”, because their power is too great and their ideas and images of humanity are diametrically opposed to our concept of freedom. We consider the desire to illuminate and control every human thought, every social relationship and even the smallest step in work processes to be dangerous. If these smallest particles are then to be controlled and adapted to a given exterior, violent domination is in its purest form!
Nevertheless, we are of course aware that we too and our everyday life are structured and in many cases thoroughly digitalised by technologies. A large part of radical left-wing contexts is organized through messengers. If things you want to buy are twice as expensive in a shop, then you order them from Amazon and use the exploitative structure behind it. Pickers, packers, suppliers also work for or because of us under miserable conditions. Not to mention the places of production…

We think it is important not to underestimate our own role and responsibility in criticism and not to deny our own interdependence and dependence. We are part of this society and thus also part of the problem. This is nothing new.

But it is precisely for this reason that it makes sense to act and to shape things ourselves. Pausing, being off and sometimes throwing sand into one’s own gears is just as much a part of it as the destruction and defence against technological attack. If we talk about the destruction of the technological attack, we must also sabotage ourselves!

CRITIQUE OF TECHNOLOGY IS CRITIQUE OF DOMINATION AND CIVILISATION – NOT PRIMITIVISM!

We do not make the ridiculous judgment that technology is “bad”. Out of which – anyway historically conditioned – ethics then? We say it is violence and social war.”

(from “digital self-determination” by the editorial collective capulcu)
Our attack from outside

We know that our attack is only a (small) sabotage, which delays the construction of the Amazon logistics centre a little and increases the costs by a few hundred thousand Euros. But we also know that many will recognize themselves in such an act of resistance against the technological attack on our bodies, our work force, our leisure time and our relationships. In this recognition, in the anger, in the determination and the drive for action lies serious potential.

And because we also recognize ourselves in the attacks of others, we would like to conclude our communiqué by taking over part of a text in which a coordinated attack on Amazon vehicles, the Amazon Development Center Germany in Berlin-Mitte and its boss, Ralf Herberich, was announced on February 1, 2019:

Work in disruptive capitalism

“The miserable working conditions and Amazon’s “innovations” in the field of precarious employment are well known. In the logistics centers, known by the Group as fulfillment centers, there is permanent control and “optimization” of processes. From the monitoring of hand scanners to mutual evaluation and the deliberate disregard of safety standards, enormous pressure is placed on the workers. So it is often not even worthwhile to go to the break room during breaks and extending breaks is usually out of the question for pickers and packers. Every move and every step in the warehouse is precisely monitored.

Most of the 200,000 parcel deliverers in Germany also work for Amazon under lousy conditions for various (sub-)companies, more or less indirectly, but in any case very flexibly. Amazon Flex, is the name of the app with which you can hopefully land the next delivery order as a bogus self-employed worker. The route to the destination address is then specified. At Amazon Mechanical Turk, the first clickworking platform, all labour rights were circumvented. On the platform, so-called micro-tasks of e.g. 10 cents each are assigned. When stupidly sorting out inappropriate content or writing product reviews, screenshots and work pace are then taken.

(Labour) struggle against the fourth industrial revolution

Meanwhile, the trade union ver.di is conducting an unsuccessful collective bargaining dispute for the 14,000 workers from 12 logistics centres. Despite “union busting”, immense obstacles to organisation and high fluctuation of the workforce in the warehouses, on the bargain day “Black Friday” 2017, according to ver.di, about 10% of the workers at seven German warehouse locations and one each in Italy and Poland organised a strike. Solidarity-based people and groups tried to block the Amazon Prime logistics centre on Kurfürstendamm in the centre of Berlin at the same time, unfortunately without causing any significant delays.

Ralf Kleber, head of Amazon Germany, once claimed: “When there is black ice, we itch much more than when ver.di calls for industrial action”.

He was right, but why can (local) strikes no longer exert the desired pressure? The automation of load distribution between warehouses across national borders makes it possible to absorb interruptions, such as strikes, to such an extent that delivery times are kept as short as desired and any impact of the strike remains almost invisible to the public. The disruption of smooth operations is made difficult or even impossible here by “intelligent” algorithms. Amazon is a pioneer in the field of this automation, which here represents a direct attack on the workers and their possibilities of regulated labour struggle. But despite and because of these worrying developments it is important to take the initiative. The fact that previous strikes have not caused serious damage to such companies does not make them superfluous. It rather shows that it is necessary to fight with greater vehemence and more “radical” means, that could mean for example more direct actions, wild international strikes and for that reason to further advance international networking. Sabotage and militant interventions (from outside) or the idea of a European general strike as proposed by the Spanish comrades (https://makeamazonpay.org/2018/05/17/675/) could dock to this as well as ideas for sabotage of the algorithms or the Internet of Things by misplaced packages or similar. A combination of traditional and new means against the new digitalized world of work is probably most promising in the (labour) struggle against a disruptive technology company like Amazon”.

You can find the whole text here: https://chronik.blackblogs.org/?p=9514

With this in mind, we greet all those in Berlin who fight against Amazon Tower, who prevented the establishment of a headquarters in Queens, who set fire to the local distribution centre in Staffordshire three times in a row on Black Friday, who fight the Cyber Valley project in Tübingen…We greet all those who set out at night to sabotage Amazon lockers, delivery trucks, construction sites, offices, drones and data centres. In the same way we greet all angry workers who do not like unsustainable working conditions and certainly do not allow themselves to be integrated into the gigantic cybernetic apparatus of global, digitalized capitalism.

And there is one more thing we want to say: Whoever decides to take action will find that some things that seem indomitable to us in everyday life can be seen up close, and many sore points are exposed to our courage and are defenceless. As always, the old rule of the burglars applies: Always check first if the door is unlocked…

A hug to all prisoners and to all who are affected by repression, surveillance and house searches.

France, AMBARÈS-ET-LAGRAVE (GIRONDE) : Christmas presents from Amazon ARE late 24/12/2020

Hundreds of parcels blocked at the warehouse after the arson of 27 delivery vehicles in Gironde

The Warning group, home delivery specialist for major French brands, lost much of its fleet of vans last night. Criminals opened them with a grinder and set fire to them before making their escape. The carrier, which provides 7-day deliveries for Amazon, has already ordered new vehicles.
Every van of the Warning company currently provides an average of 120 deliveries each day. 27 carbonized vehicles, more than 3,200 parcels may not reach their recipient on Thursday for Christmas Eve.

« We called on fellow service providers to ensure a maximum of deliveries and our client, the Amazon group, that these vehicles were dedicated for, was also able to turn to other carriers. » Quentin Bonnac, general manager of the Warning group, specifies however.

Last night at around 2am firefighters were called for this fire in the car park rented by the company in Ambarès-et-Lagrave, near Bordeaux.

« The perpetrators entered the vehicles by opening them using disk cutters then set fire to them. Their intention was probably to find goods awaiting delivery » the carrier suggests, adding « no theft could be committed, as the vehicles are systematically emptied every evening and loaded at the start of each round. »

The struggle against the flames went on for nearly two hours with around 30 firefighters mobilized to prevent spreading to heavy trucks parked nearby. The carrier, which ensures deliveries 7 days a week for Amazon, has already ordered new vehicles. While waiting to receive them the drivers went to another company site in Nantes to pick up available vans in order to resume their rounds on Saturday.

Citroen

Berlin: Attack On Citroen Dealership

We heard a few weeks ago the words “Urgent Appeal for international solidarity!” written by libertarian communists from Athens. For the common fight against the terror of the EU Troika and the police and their armies, which have long worked closely together, we would welcome more of such clear words from Greece.

The antagonistic cooperation projects and clandestine structures in Europe is not as reliant on personal acquaintance, as having regard to the mutual needs and strategic objectives. With us there is no clarity as to what level of militancy (after the disaster in the Marfin Bank) is now accepted and what forms of international solidarity is welcome.

From the cultural and human hell of barbarism in Germany it is against this background to support not just the social or anti social struggles in Greece. The clearer the requirements are formulated, the easier to be guided in the distant strikes against the common enemy. Therefore, we have got this call, and we always expect a clear statement in our international relations.

Specifically, we express our solidarity with the non-reformist protests of the Greek population against the dictatorship of the banks and their parliamentary puppets.

We demand freedom for the prisoners from the armed groups, for the prisoners of the anarchist movement, and for the social prisoners in Greek prisons.

We want to support their fight against the MAT killers, the secret police, the terror of the Nazis, and various specialized units such as Delta.

On 13 June 2011 we have so attacked in Berlin-Lichtenberg a Citroën dealer with incendiary devices. Ten cars were destroyed. We opted for Citroën, because this French company supplies vehicles to the Greek police. Greek cops operate with patrol cars from Citroen, preying on migrants and use the technology of this company for the suppression of social tensions.

With our attack on a Berlin Citroën dealer, we show the profiteers of the internal war that there is no clear front. What transports Athens Cops to their operations, can burn in Berlin before they get there.

Autonomous group “Christos Tsoutsouvis”

Incendiary attack against vehicles at Peugeot-Citroën dealership in Thessaloniki by Anarchist cell ‘Les casseurs’

To clarify once and for all: Power cannot exist without us. We can live without it (and even better). Power drains us of our essence; it pillages life.

[Excerpt from: ‘Manifesto of Rebellion – Signapost to a Different Future’ ; December 2008]

The imposition of domination knows no national boundaries or state divisions, nor is it concentrated in the hands of a minority elite headquartered in a specific part of the world. Power pervades every part of this world’s metropolises, every human relationship structured according to the capitalist standards.

The era we live in has all the characteristics of a contemporary war; a war triggered by domination and counting victims – its only way to perpetuate its existence. For almost four months the unrest continues in Paris and other cities of the French territory over a proposed new labour law, despite the intensifying control and repression in response to the recent ISIS attacks and in view of the Euro tournament. The struggle is manifested by all means, from occupations of squares, theatres, factories, to attacks against banks, stores, and large-scale clashes with cops.

Without deluding ourselves, we’re able to realise that the future of demand-centred struggles is doomed and the subjects of social struggles may be carriers of authoritarian logics. However, the reality of social unrest is the field amid which minorities can develop effective solidarity and equality relations, where they may find themselves overcoming fear through clashes with cops and developing the consciousness that the voting of a bill is nothing compared to the existence of laws, is nothing compared to the existence of every Power.

Let the upheavals in the French territory be another occasion for the encounter and organisation of our action. The only stance which befits us is the strengthening of combative confrontation, the reversal of fear, the socialisation of this reality, and the only way to achieve all this is none other than diversion from normalcy in every part of daily life. Let the broken windows in Besançon, the sabotage of ATMs, the burning of a police car in Paris, the Molotov cocktails against Toulouse’s police station become the trigger for realising that revolutionary prospects are widened within insurrectionary events and through social destabilisation, which is neither self-existent, nor a parthenogenesis. On the contrary, it’s the goal of polymorphous anarchic struggle, that’s also responsible for its preparation, for transferring the war to the here and now, away from delegation logics, away from logics of waiting for ripe social conditions; for promoting the system’s destabilisation, for making visible the two opposite camps that exist: either with the present world, or its deniers.

In the early hours of Thursday June 23rd 2016, we set fire to exhibits of the French car dealership Peugeot-Citroën on Vasilissis Olgas Avenue in Thessaloniki as a minimum gesture of solidarity with the rebels in the streets of Paris, Toulouse, Lyon and everywhere else.

Anarchist cell ‘Les casseurs’

PS. We dedicate our action not only to rebels across the French territory but also to the anarchist comrades Yannis Naxakis and Grigoris Sarafoudis [both incarcerated in Greece], who stand second-instance trial for the bank robbery in Pyrgetos on July 5th 2016 [in the court of appeals on Loukareos Street, Athens]. Anarchist prisoners are never alone; solidarity that takes the offensive will break the bars of isolation imposed by domination.

Athens, Greece: Responsibility Claim for the Incendiary Attack Against the Citroen Dealership on December 6th

You, that robbed us of everything, that place us under the painful scrutiny of systematic surveillance and uniformed thugs, you, you would be the ones pleading lies about forgiveness.

You drag us from rooftops and houses, from streets and squares, you judge, you order, you cage.

You shoot and you win. And we won’t accept.

As the city glimmers with the flames that dance and not just your cursed lights of captivity, fear grows in your eyes.

For tonight it is your collaborators, your infrastructure, your damned cars that you will use to chase us, but at any time it might just be you.

On the evening of December 6th 2019, nine incendiary devices were placed under the same amount of cars at a Citroen dealership in Athens, for being one of the many that provides the material for the Greek Police Force to hunt and detain.

Your network will be threatened, your allies will be torched, your suffering will be ensured.

Never forgive.

Towards the total collapse of the police and their bloody supporters.

Rostock, Germany: 4 Transport Trucks Belonging to NATO Logistics Partner Deutsche Bahn Torched

In the morning hours of January 29th 2019, we used the cover of darkness to torch four parked Deutsche Bahn transporters, resulting in property damage of 100,000 euros.

Every eviction has its price:
The controversy surrounding the eviction of the Black Triangle project in Leipzig, which was located on unused land owned by Deutsche Bahn, did not pass us by. We don’t want to comment on the allegations as we don’t want to judge them from a distance. There is no denying overt sexist behavior and mockery and our solidarity goes to the victims of these abuses. Nevertheless, it was an attempt to build a space away from the logic of capitalist exploitation. Even though the squatters were controversial, spaces like the Black Triangle are particularly important in a federal state such as Saxony and we were shocked by the lack of solidarity from the ‘scene’ in Leipzig. Our solidarity goes to all radical left-wing projects threatened with eviction, these projects help us come a step closer to our dream of a liberated society.

War against war:
The subsidiary of Deutsche Bahn, DB Schenker, together with its partner company ESG Electronic Systems and Logistics Germany, manages a large central warehouse in Kassel-Kaufungen for the Bundesweher (Armed Forces). The central federal warehouse – ZEBEL, has a total area of around 17,000 square meters. From this hub, the supply of civilian companies and military repair facilities that repair the Bundeswehr defense systems and vehicles takes place. DB Schenker gives top priority to war freight transports.

Deutsche Bahn is the leading logistics partner for NATO and responsible for the transport of war supplies to German troops and their partner the fascist Turkish regime. Deutsche Bahn is directly profiting from the war against the Kurdish civilian population and the fight against the YPG / YPJ People’s Defense Units.

Our thoughts are with those who cannot be with us because they are persecuted by the state.

Freedom for everyone!

(Berlin) return to sender: the fire of their wars

In the danger zones of Berlin, the police carry out an aggressive spatial occupation by besieging neighborhoods in Friedrichshain and Neukölln or by occupying public places and parks in Kreuzberg. Manhunters are in action against young people, against migrants, against outcasts. They also prepare evictions of occupied spaces. In response to calls for decentralized action, we found what we were looking for in Marzahn and attacked a truck belonging to the war profiteer DB Schenker with simple means in the night of May 27th 2020.

In the shadow of the pandemic and the associated media attention, NATO armies carry out their bloody trade every day on the large and small battlefields of the world.

This is also the case in Rojava. A week ago it was reported that the Turkish state is continuing its attacks on northern Syria. In the village Şiyûx west of Kobar and two civilians have been injured by artillery fire. The area west of Kobanê has been under artillery fire from the Turkish occupation zone around Djarablus for four days. To the west of Ain Issa, artillery attacks have been fired at the M4 link road and the villages Hoşan and Xalidyê. The shelling has set fire to fields in the region. Fighter jets are circling over Ain Issa. In the villages of Cirin, Qeter and Kulik in the region around Girê Spî (Valley Abyad), Turkish Jihadist occupying forces have set fire to fields.

To the military-civilian complex, this is intended to serve as a decision-making aid for the sensible members of the corporate management: burning trucks as a reason to stop logistics for the NATO forces and to withdraw the vehicle fleet from Berlin. Berlin is a dangerous city for DB Schenker and other companies. Due to the police flooding of some areas, the economy is defenceless against our attacks in other districts.

Those responsible in the Senate recall the decentralized concepts of autonomous groups: whoever signs the eviction order for Liebig34 is committing political suicide. Be it through the unsuccessful siege of certain neighborhoods or the eternally same agitation against the inner enemy; the actors of the city as a target cannot escape us.

To achieve this, the forces that want a fundamental change do not necessarily have to reorient themselves and reposition themselves internationally, as the Volcano Group Shut Down the Power demands in its statement on the attack on the Heinrich Hertz Institute. More consistency and perseverance in implementing previous strategies can also achieve something.

Sabotage war profiteers until they withdraw from the aggression against Rojava!

Attack everything decentrally until the official renunciation of the eviction terror against rented flats, occupied spaces and Liebig34 is announced!

Berlin: No peace for war profiteers - revenge for Şehîd Sara and all others: DB Schenker truck set on fire

In Kurdistan, not a day goes by without war. In addition to military operations, the Turkish state is currently waging a low-intensity war. This means that smaller attacks are continuously being carried out at various levels (military, supply, etc.). The purpose of the strategy seems to be to wear down the local people. But it also causes Internationalists worldwide to lose sight of the struggles in Kurdistan and turn to other issues.
As internationalists we do not see ourselves as supporters but as part of the struggle. But in the capitalist metropolises we have learned to react reflexively to grievances with short term campaigns. Unfortunately, this makes us predictable and our actions often retain only symbolic character. In the case of the attacks on Kurdistan in recent years, we have always responded only to large-scale military offensives of the Turkish state: We responded to the Turkish attack on Afrin Canton in January 2018 with the Fight4Afrin campaign https://fight4afrin.noblogs.org/if-afrin-falls-it-will-have-been-too-late/, and to the attack on Kobanê and Cizîrê Cantons in October 2019 with the Riseup4Rojava https://riseup4rojava.org/call/ and Fight4Rojava campaigns https://fight4rojava.noblogs.org/call/. During the campaigns we have shown how creative and determined we can be together in the heart of the beast! We have shown how much we reject the support of the Turkish state in its warfare and take our own risks! We have shown that we know the profiteers, can name others and make them pay! We have shown that different forms of action complement each other and that we will not let ourselves be divided!

But even after the campaigns, the slogan "German weapons, German money murder all over the world!" has lost nothing of its topicality. The economy and politics in the heart of the beast continue to create the conditions against which our friends in Kurdistan are fighting.

We think that we should not lose focus and instead turn the tables: Break the continuity of the war and its support with our own continuity of attacks to wear down the profiteers of war. We have to break with the campaign logic and strategically discuss how we can create a continuity of attacks on our part together. Our current proposal is that campaign-style attacks should be replaced by continuous, asymmetric attacks, by which we mean: attacking at unpredictable times, in surprising places, poorly protected targets whose direct connection to the conflict is not visible at first glance. We must not lose sight of our goals, even if they are pushed into the background by media attention. We want to remain focused, even in times when other issues seem more topical at first glance. Actions with different objectives should always be combined (causing material damage, creating publicity, etc.). The struggle must remain constant on the streets of Europe to show the war profiteers that there is no quiet hinterland for them!

We set fire to a DB Schenker truck in Berlin-Lichtenberg in the night from 10 to 11.4.2021. To prevent the fire from spreading to other nearby objects, our ignition device started in the middle area of the truck and not at the very front under the driver's cab and engine. To this - and to a possibly more robust ground protection of the vehicles of this group, we attribute the lower damage. The company DB Schenker earns its money, among other things, with logistics for NATO forces and is jointly responsible for armament transports to the Turkish army.
We call for attacks on DB Schenker, which could mean publicly exposing the company or finding and destroying their trucks parked in the streets. One truck means property damage for the company, many trucks could cause the company to get out of the defense industry. Since DB Schenker operates internationally, the company can also be attacked in many places.

We dedicate this action to our friend Sarah Handelmann (Şehîd Sara Dorşîn), who was taken from us two years ago, on 7.4.2019. She was assassinated by the Turkish Air Force in the mountains of Southern Kurdistan. Sara, you are immortal and will always be with us in our struggle and our hearts!

Promesas de guerra. Fuego y cristales rotos en Madrid.

Durante las últimas semanas del mes de diciembre 2019 fueron decorados, rotas las lunas, pinchadas las ruedas y/o arrancados los retrovisores de alrededor de 50 motos y 40 coches de alquiler, del burger king, de inmobiliarias, de seguridad, de bancos… También fueron reventadas las pantallas de una docena de cajeros.

Un cajero de la Caixa y otro de Santander fueron presa de las llamas. Cuatro coches de alquiler, dos del banco Santander, dos de inmobiliarias, uno de prosegur y uno de securitas ardieron durante la noche.

Quizá quedan muy grandes las llamadas a la guerra, no queremos hacer una analogía con otros lugares del globo en el que el conflicto ha alcanzado cotas de destrucción y muerte que no contemplamos por aquí. No son estas palabras un ejercicio de alarde, un selfie ególatra. Son simplemente un muestrario de cosas que suceden, de instantes de pasión en un mundo monótono y sin sentido. Un intento de potenciar y multiplicar la acción antagónica.

Evitar que un banco abra durante unos días, interrumpir el tránsito de mercancías o dañar directamente instrumentos de represión es importante y muestra al poder instantáneamente vulnerable. Asumiendo, claro está, que estos ritmos de destrucción son absolutamente asimilables por el capital y que se repone de ellos muy rápido.

En cualquier caso, no queremos permanecer pasivos ante la perpetuación de esta realidad: continentes enteros convertidos en campos de concentración, ciudades de zombis consumistas que generan la devastación de la vida en todos sus sentidos, la autoridad y el beneficio subyugando cualquier tipo de relación…

No queremos caer en la virtualización de la vida y también de la lucha, en la que solo se representa el espectáculo de la revuelta para que después especialistas de la política de todos los espectros consideren la legitimidad o no de la acción. No vamos a separar el discurso de la praxis. Actuamos y hablamos.

Aunque algunas hayamos abandonado la esperanza de futuros idílicos no nos negamos el placer y la convicción de querer experimentar o imaginar la ausencia de dominación. Apostamos por la destrucción, pero esta no puede ser únicamente física. El ataque a la autoridad responde a una responsabilidad individual que nos lleva a querer eliminar elementos que la sustentan, como nosotros mismos. Llámate destrucción, revolución interior o asesinato del policía que llevamos...
dentro la conciencia de los privilegios y de la actividad perpetuadora del orden existente es necesaria. Y ésta no puede mantenernos nunca a la espera, sino que debería funcionar como un impulso en la convicción de una destrucción necesaria, desde dentro y hacia fuera.
Queremos una lucha multiforme, lo que no implica unas prácticas reformistas sino la búsqueda de diferentes caminos de confrontación, que no den margen a la recuperación y que no entablen diálogo con el poder.
No vamos a esperar el momento adecuado ni al “despertar” de las masas. A la eterna promesa e inevitable demora del cuantitativo oponemos la espontaneidad y pasión de lo cualitativo.
Asumiendo que la lucha por la liberación viene, se sustenta y va siempre hacia el individuo.
Por todxs lxs compañerxs represaliadxs.
Por la liberación total.
Desde y hacia la anarquía.

The Strength of the Fact: Santander Bank Vehicle Torched

How can we not act in these times of theoretical and practical disarmament of revolutionary forces? How not to resort, once again, to the force of fact, of direct action, to remember that the struggle against everything that oppresses us will be the work of the oppressed themselves, or it will not be?

During the night of Thursday, January 9th 2020, a vehicle from the Santander bank was set on fire in Vallekas. May the struggle continue to strike those who are guilty of our misery. Because we don’t forget the role of the Santander bank in the repression against the revolt in Chile, because we don’t forget their dirty business in prisons, because their capitalist greed is evident in every eviction, because the banks are a key part in the cogwheel of the system that subdues and exploits us, like the businessmen, like the ministers, like the mayors, like the parliamentarians, like the councilmen, like the politicians, like the judges, and in short, like the state.

Strength and solidarity to all those who are under attack from the State!

Special greetings to the comrades from Tetuan who were attacked in May and to the comrades accused of torching an ATM in Madrid on April 11th, 2018!

Berlin: Flames for Liebig34 – Against the City of the Rich

On 2.6 2020 we set fire to four Euronet gmbH ATMs (in Berlin Mitte, Kreuzberg, Friedrichshain and Neukölln) in solidarity with Liebig 34 and as a warning to the state, capital and its accomplices what will happen if they try to evict L34.

As the owner of the L34 building and the owner of numerous houses in Berlin, Padovicz rents parts of his land to Euronet for commercial use. Independently of this, Euronet’s ATMs are part of the capitalist infrastructure and capital’s plans for the total gentrification of our neighbourhoods. A city is being created, which is centrally involved in the best possible exploitation of mass tourism, and neighbourhoods are being planned which are intended for residents who do not care about fees for withdrawing money.

In such a city, of course, there is no place for anti-hierarchical and self-governing open spaces like the anarcho-queer-feminist housing project such as Liebig 34, which Padovicz, state and capital want to replace with a money machine that serves capital and allows capital to emerge.

Of course, we do not hope for redemption from the courts and we know that the justice system serves the interests of capital.

What we want are occupied houses and decentralized actions in solidarity with Liebig 34 and as a counter-attack on the state and capital.

We are fed up with the plans of Padovicz and all the other rent sharks!

We will meet on the streets of rage!

Liebig 34 will stay!

Solidarity greetings to the uprisings in Minneapolis and the other cities in the USA!

Athens: Taking responsibility for the attack on American company Euronet in solidarity with Dimitris Koufontinas

Dimitris Koufontinas, fighter of the 17 November Revolutionary Organization, has been on hunger strike since 8th January, demanding to be transferred to Korydallos prison. The right-wing administration, extending the state of emergency and making it permanent, suspended its own legislation to avenge the unrepentant and militant stance of D. Koufontinas.

Thus, he was transferred from the rural prisons of Kassavetia to the prison of Domokou, with a false document that allegedly presented him as being in Korydallos prison.

Constantly in the crosshairs of the Greek and American states, D. Koufontinas goes on a hunger strike for the umpteenth time, claiming the basic rights acquired against the revenge of democracy. The hardening of the anti-terrorist regulation in the prisons in the person of D. Koufontina, foreshadows the treatment reserved by the State for the militant prisoners in conflict with the regime. This is confirmed daily by the outrageous Sofia Nikolaou with her statements and interviews, describing the state plan for the extermination of the political opponents of domination.

As a minimum sign of solidarity with the hunger strike of Dimitris Koufontinas as well as the 2 other hunger strikers Nikos Maziotis and Giannis Dimitrakis we chose to attack with paint and hammers on Thursday 28/1/2021, causing damage to the Euronet headquarters right next to Kallithea Stavros Niarchos Foundation’s cultural centre. This company is an American provider of electronic payment services, based in Kansas, which offers worldwide automated cash registers (ATMs), point of sale (POS) services, credit / debit card services, currency exchange and other online financial services and payment software. As of 2019, Euronet serves 50,000 ATMs and 330,000 point of sale terminals in 170 countries.

France : 10 vehicles of jail constructor up in smoke

In Limoges, France, in the industrial zone of Magret, flames ravaged ten trucks and three sheds belonging to Eurovia, a subsidiary company of the Vinci multinational which is particularly involved in the construction of new prisons, as well as developing the devastating project of the Notre-Dame-des-Landes airport.

The vehicles were stationed in two storage areas twenty metres apart. Ignition devices were placed on the truck tyres. They consisted of a bottle filled with petrol with a candle and a firelighter. The damage is estimated to be at least one million euros, not counting the long delays at the construction sites as a result. Build cages, get back our rage

Paris: Enemies of this World – Incendiary Action Against Vinci and SNCF

We think that direct action is also a way to escape the impasses of the middle-class activist swamp and its unoffensive slogans and common practices that are uncritically accepted and all to often remain a dead end. Alone, associated for a night or for life- according to the needs of each- let’s leave the dogmas behind and choose the chaos of life. For the defenders of this world we are criminals. We are simply its enemies and we are proud of it.
On the night of Thursday, October 11th to the 12th 2018, on rue d’Hautpoul in the 19th arrondissement of Paris, a utility van of prison construction company Vinci and a car of SNCF (who hunt the poor and undocumented) were torched.

A thought for Krème, for the comrade incarcerated for the Limoges gendarmerie arson and for the anarchists who are facing trial in Italy (Scripta Manent and Panico).

Saint-Etienne, Burning Equipment and Reflections Against Those Who Make Use of It

We still remember skimming the assemblies, the furious streets, the blockades, the occupied squares. We remember diving into the posters, the leaflets, and the journals [1]. We were open in our words and encounters, avid and impatient to have it out with this world we were born into and that makes us die a little more each day. Raised on the morality of class, we approached the workers.Were they not our allies by definition? We dreamed of Haymarket, while most others dreamed of their buying power and a good retirement. We wanted to burn it down, they wanted to work better. We were too restless at work to not become disillusioned through contact with the exploited. This text is a distant echo of the nocturnal arson of May 14 and 16, 2019. These were attacks against work, of course, but also against all those who contribute to perpetuating it.
Saint-Etienne, two in the morning… With quiet steps, we approached the site of this monstrous public works. The gate is open. We hesitate, we’re afraid, but the desire for action dissipates our apprehensions. We enter then separate. Each participant in the raid knows what to do. A subtle blend of anticipation and improvisation. Each prepares their vehicle, making no distinction between those of the company and individuals. Someone gives the signal. Suddenly, the lights above are joined by flames. We regrouped and rushed into the night.

What we destroyed is part of the means of production. The morality of class tells us that the labouring class, and it alone, can sabotage these means within the framework of their balance of power with the exploiting class. With the exception of a few Luddite moments, sabotage has never attained truly destructive intentions or intensities. This same morality insists as well that the labouring class should reappropriate the means of production. We won’t go on about historical examples because we don’t care. The people’s airports, prisons, and highways, we hate them all anyway. The means of production that make them possible should only be annihilated. And we won’t wait for the exploited to have a revelation to arm our resolve. Class struggle is a scam, since all classes reproduce themselves through work. Profit and power for some, salaries for others. Together, an indissoluble community of interest. Co-management. And you want us to march on May Day in the middle of this stinking, crawling crowd! No, we are filled with rage against work, its harm crushes our lives.

It’s tricky to write about responsibility, especially when it is individual. For ourselves, we try to navigate between the shores of the doctrines of free will and absolute determinism. Those who unluckily crash on one side or the other are good reference points to orient our craft. We recognize that to a highly variable degree, individuals are always responsible for their actions.

Beyond the role their activity [2] plays for their class, the “workforce” retains their subjectivity and their power to act in all situations. Precisely where their power is found is also their responsibility. Those who resonate with these premises can begin to shift their gaze away from the state and capital to see the countless ordinary responsible parties. Those who lock doors. Who search bodies. Who assign grades. Who experiment in the laboratory. Who drive across the country to sell soda. Who automatically prescribe drugs, who sleep in their military uniform, who push their shopping cart, who drive a big rig, who go on ski trips, who install digital locks. Who take the subway, who slink down the street, crawl in the office, come home from the factory, pour back beers, enslave their wives, eat in restaurants, follow fashion trends, who sleep like the dead. Only to then swallow three coffees and start it all over again. Eight hours a day, 250 days a year, for forty years of life.
For a salary, these ordinary responsible parties aggravate the conditions of everyone around them, murder what is beautiful until the Earth weeps. And yet, this herd of workers doesn’t trash their work site or the means of production. So we will continue to do so. Because it’s necessary.

Two days later, new Vinci [3] vehicles will sleep on the pavement. In a week, the quarry will relaunch its extractive machinery. Our acts are as useless as their consequences are ephemeral. And regardless of similar actions, there won’t be chaos. We attack only for ourselves, to make and remake the intimate experience of our refusal of this world. The meaning and consistency of our lives emerges only in these few seconds.

Leipzig, Germany: 2 Eurovia Vinci Excavators Torched in Solidarity with Imprisoned Comrades

Prison Profiteers Attacked – Excavators Torched – Solidarity with the Park Bench 3

During the night of October 11th 2019, we set fire to two Eurovia Vinci excavators. Vinci, as a global company, has shown many times in the past and in the present that it apologizes for NOTHING and that it is ready to accept any order, no matter how dirty.

This can be seen in many examples, especially in the construction project of an airport near Nantes (France), where the now evicted ZAD was located. Here Vinci, in cooperation with the French government, want to clear 200 hectares of forest to build the third largest airport in France. However, this project was prevented by militant and civil society protests. Vinci is also involved in the construction of prisons making them a part of a system of domination and oppression.

This domination was opposed by some determined people at the G7 summit in Biarritz. Despite the military isolation of the city, they succeeded in penetrating the city of Bayonne north of Biarritz and letting their rage run free. This action resulted in a total of 68 arrests, 38 of whom were remanded in custody.

Vinci’s machinations are against our idea of a just and liberated society, which is why the company and its infrastructure were and will remain our targets. Look around – there are many Vinci construction sites.

Paris: Fire against a Vinci van

During the night of 21-22 January 2020, a Vinci van was set on fire in the 20th arrondissement of Paris (rue Gambon).
Vinci builds prisons (and other shit, the open-air prison, made of misery, exploitation and control).

It is thought that it is urgent to revive a conflicting practice against the prison system, the prisons, those who build them, those who make them exist.

As a beautiful communiqué from Madrid puts it, “how can we not act, in an era of theoretical and practical disarmament of revolutionary forces?”.

Solidarity with those who resist, within these walls. Solidarity with those who struggle outside.

Berlin: Arson Against GA Tec and Eurovia Vinci Vans

Practical solidarity with the defendants of the trials in Hamburg and the rebellious prisoners. The proceedings concerning the G20 in Hamburg are continuing, the Park Bench 3 proceedings are continuing. The vehicles of the prison profiteers burn with a crackling sound during Berlin’s Corona Nights. This is the minimum that can be done, considering the riots in many prisons around the world in recent weeks:

March 9, riots in 27 Italian prisons, at least 8 prisoners killed, 6 of them in Modena.

Mid-March, riots in several Spanish prisons, including in Brians.

Since March 31, riots in 13 Colombian prisons, 23 prisoners killed, numerous escapes.

March 23, 9 prisoners escape from South Dakota Women’s Prison, USA.

Late March / early April, massive revolts and breakouts in Iranian prisons.

April 6, mutiny in Cordoba prison, Argentina.

Riots in the prison of Qoubeh, in Tripoli / Lebanon.

April 9, mutiny in Irbutuk, Russia.

Mid-April, strike in Korydallos prison, rebellion in Eleonas Women’s Prison, Greece.

On April 18th 2020, a GA Tec van was torched a Falkplatz in Prenzlauer Berg and 3 days later a Eurovia Vinci vehicle was torched at Lichtenburg station. GA Tec is owned by the Sodexo Consortium, operates private prisons in England and is part of the deportation industry in Germany. Eurovia Vinci builds prisons and other misanthropic projects and operates Toll-Collect, a private surveillance agency. Both companies are regularly attacked around the world and therefore offer themselves as sustainable targets.
Anonymous authors correctly recognized in the paper “A few thoughts on urban policy in times of technological attack” – Autonomes Blättchen #40, that different cities are competing with each other for locations for new technologies and the corresponding image. Furthermore they want to determine further the practical approach and suggest focusing the resistance on individual actors. Specifically they want to oppose Tesla, Google, Zalando and Amazon. One strength of the campaign against DHL was that their vehicles were parked everywhere. Even in the campaign against Castor Transports, it was easy to find DB and Vattenfal vehicles. The weakness of militant campaigns has always been a creeping end before the enemy kneels; with a few exceptions (NOlympia 1993 or Frank Henkel 2016). Campaigns end because targets become few, other issues become more important, or because it seems too risky.

With the tech industry as the primary field of intervention, the limits of militant small groups are quickly reached, those of open groups are not. The addition of different levels of resistance requires self-confident open structures that do not distance themselves from attacks. And the readiness for a continuous but asymmetrical practice of clandestine connections. Projects such as the Berliner Liste a few years ago, can be continued endlessly and are always topical. The trick is not to get bogged down by arbitrariness in the selection of targets, or, as the above text puts it, not to be target-oriented, nor to become predictable.

The image of the city of Berlin suffers when companies cannot give their employees the vehicles they need to get home. Insecurity is our factor. Many sparks increase the chance of a larger fire. The tech industry can only remain virtual without the companies building their temples, guarding them, separating the superfluous. So our proposal is based on an easily imitated riotous arson campaign against the whole range of urban political actors to attack everything that is necessary for the functioning of their kind of city in accordance with methods that are unpredictable for them.

Freedom and happiness for the prisoners – decay for the profiteers of the prison society!

Explosive Attack on Prison Profiteers Sodexo in Santiago, Chile

OUR COMMON MINIMUM: INSURRECTIONAL ACTION

Since March 22, different subversive and anarchist prisoners carried out a hunger strike to demand the repeal of D.L 321, the freedom of comrade Marcelo Villarroel and the prisoners of the revolt. Faced with this scenario of anti-prison warfare, we point out:

1. During the night of the 11th of Black May 2021 and prior to the curfew we detonated an explosive device in front of the SODEXO company for its responsibility in the daily misery that tortures thousands of prisoners in the prisons of the Chilean democracy. SODEXO is in charge of the concession of the Antofagasta, Iquique, La Serena, Rancagua and El Manzano prisons. The joint work between the Gendarmerie, the Chilean State-Police and private capital make up a triad that shows the lucrative business of the prisons-companies, annihilating the dignity of the prison population based on their economic interests and the social order of the rich and powerful.

2. We warmly greet the comrades who carried out a hunger strike for 50 days, demonstrating that the combative imprisonment is a tool of resistance to prison submission, at the same time that it spreads the germ of action in the streets. It is vital to maintain a combat rhythm that accompanies the intra-prison mobilization processes, understanding that the fight for the liberation of our prisoners and their confinement conditions is long-term and without rest.

3. In a context of police and military control, the attack is possible, it only depends on our will and spirit to fight. In this sense, the discourse that all revolutionary action is assembly only affects the fighting spirit of those who organize and rise up with dignity in the face of the enemy, devaluing a history of struggle that advances with hundreds of imprisoned comrades, wounded and dead. If we do not believe in our capabilities, the construction of a new world will only be a chimera; we call to organize the attack in all territories and realities.

4. In this Black May, we remember our comrade Mauricio Morales who died 12 years ago in action trying to attack the Gendarmerie School. The memory is kept alight in the streets and in the multiform action; only those who are forgotten die.

WE CELEBRATE THE OFFENSIVE AND SABOTAGE IN THE WALLMAPU!

WE GREET THE REVOLT IN COLOMBIAN TERRITORY!

TO RETURN TO THE STREETS TO CRUSH THE ENEMY AND REFORMISM!
THIS WEEKEND, TO VOTE IS TO VALIDATE THE PACT OF THE POLITICAL CLASS AND CHEAT THE SPILLED BLOOD!

Hertz

Athens: Claim of an incendiary attack against Hertz by “December Nights” (6.12.20)

During this past year, no matter how many things have changed, one has remained as before: the benediction of Chrisochoidis [Ministry for the protection of citizens] and Koulis [nickname given to prime minister, Mitsotakis] to all the abominations of the police. Néa Dimokratía has announced that the police will be in the frontline in bringing about their politic. It would seem that the government has given them total control in the city management. The new normal framework is made up of police units, checks, fines, harassment and beatings.

This is the situation we are living in each day. The paradox is that almost everyone considers this normal. The growing repression, especially over these days, makes us even more angry. Seeing how the cops are behaving we remember even more intensely that the same scum, with the same State responsibility, killed our young comrade 12 years ago.

However, if we are spontaneously angry at the behaviour of the police, they are not the only ones responsible. The responsibility also falls on the shoulders of all those who support and facilitate the disgrace they call work. Hertz has worked with the Greek police over recent months, supplying them with vehicles. Vehicles with which the cops can control more places and travel through cities more easily to intimidate and arrest anyone they don’t like faster.

As a result of these reflections, in the early morning of December 6th [2020], the day after the murder of Alexandros Grigoropoulos by the cop Korkoneas and his accomplice Saraliotis, we set fire to a Hertz vehicle, in Sygrou Avenue.
A small tribute to the memory of Alexandros and all the dead comrades. A minimal response to the existence of the cops and the State. A small breath of freedom in the suffocating grip of the metropolis.

Incendiary Attack on Hertz Truck in Berlin for Dimitris Koufontinas

Since January 8, Dimitris Koufontinas has been on hunger strike to achieve his transfer to Korydallos prison. Previously, the Greek government of Nea Dimokratia had transferred him from a prison near Volos to the high security prison of Domokos. This as part of its policy of revenge against prisoners in general and especially against Koufontinas as a prisoner of the Revolutionary Organization November 17.

For us, this matter takes on significance in that Dimitris is one of the few convicts of November 17 who did not repent in court and was the only one to take political responsibility for the group’s actions.

Even though the RO 17 November has been disbanded for almost twenty years, it remains forever as a link in history that creates a continuity from the resistance against the German occupation of Greece until 1944, through the struggle against the right-wing terror in the Civil War until 1949 and the resistance against the military dictatorship of the Obrists from 1967 – 1974, and since then continues to express itself in the social struggles against any regime in this country.

Despite different theoretical and practical analyses and concepts, November 17 has been one of the armed groups in Europe whose anti-imperialist and communist tendency, despite some criticisms, continues to be a positive reference point for the anarchist struggle in the streets, which for us can be seen in the numerous attacks of solidarity.

In order to emphasize the demands of Dimitris Koufontinas and to give strength to those who are currently distributing fire in the Greek cities for this conflict, we attacked an equipment supplier of the Greek police on the night of February 18.

Inspired by an attack on a Hertz car rental in Athens in December, we set fire to a Hertz truck in Hönower Weg in Lichtenberg. Hertz provides vehicles to the Greek police, especially to the OPKE unit. Whether Hertz does this for free, as is sometimes claimed, or at very favorable conditions, this company is thus tangible to our rage. Hold out, Dimitris!

Our struggle is not finished until all prisoners are free!

Berlin: Hertz van consigned to the flames - Against constitutional courts and curfews
18.04.2021

Last week the rent cap was overturned by the Constitutional Court. This rent cap meant for many Berliners to be able to afford an apartment in their hometown. (*)

The verdict now not only makes this impossible but also means large repayments to the fucking landlords. Such a mess must not remain unanswered. That's why we set fire to a Hertz van in the street Zur Börse. Hertz equips the Greek cops, so with pleasure they can be the target of this tenant reaction.

In addition, this crappy restriction to move is also unacceptable. We will not be locked up for months! Should the nationwide curfew come from 9 p.m. you should rather think twice to let your company cars parked around in our neighborhoods. We have enough of the shit and will try not to let you rest.

Brussels

Three in one – On the 10th of March 2013, unknown arsonists put fire to an office building in Anderlecht (Brussels) occupied by Siemens, Fujitsu and Cytec. Damage was considerable; three fires were discovered and it took the firemen 4 hours to extinguish the fire, because the fire spread into the fake ceilings and the isolation of the walls. Siemens is a big player on the international market of industrial technologies destroying the planet (from weaponry to nuclear, from factory technologies over train transport to household appliances); Fujitsu excels in the technological development and telecommunication transforming the world in a mega-machine with the human being as an accessory, while Cytes is a chemical plant producing high quality plastic like you can find everywhere on the fields, beaches, in the rivers and in the middle of the oceans. Basel, Switzerland Advent, Advent two cars burning

Like a black thread it runs through history - the rebellious violence against dominion in all colors and shades.

Despite all attempts at integration, all repression, all apparent hopelessness and confusion, the passion of freedom continues to blaze today.

In the night from Saturday to Sunday 17.12.2018, this fire spilled over to two vehicles:
First, a car from Siemens. Through its history - of active involvement in Nazism, the manufacture of war and control equipment, and the development of so-called 'smart' technologies - this company has repeatedly been targeted by the insurgents. In this context, technological progress is anything but a neutral process, but rather the next stage in the history of capitalist expropriation.

On the other hand, a delivery truck of the construction company Implenia, which earns its money from the construction of today's prisons, camps and repression temples.

Let this old world perish!

Long live anarchy!

Vienna, Austria: Arson against Implenia and Kent

On the night of January 28th 2019, we set fire to a construction machine that was located on a Implenia company’s construction site. Implenia is one of the main responsible companies working on the extension of the deportation prison "Bässlergut" in Basel. As a result, they are instrumental in further expanding the deportation industry.

On the same night, we set fire to a vehicle owned by the Kent restaurant chain. For years, they have openly carried a support of the fascist government in Turkey and its dictator Erdogan. This government is committing a genocide against the Kurdish population and on revolutionary people who have joined the fight for Rojava.
They were flames of revenge. Revenge for the persecution and recent condemnation of Basel 18. Allies*, who decided to unload their anger in June 2016 and made a wild demonstration in central Basel to fight against racism, repression and deportation. On this demo, institutions and companies were attacked that push this shit.

They were flames of anger. Anger at the European deportation system and the fundamental problem of national territories. This system tortures, murders and deports people against their will. It prevents people from living their lives self determined and dignified. It makes people criminals due to origin and skin color.

They were flames of solidarity. Solidarity with the revolutionary forces of Rojava. Every day they stand up against the fascists of the Turkish army and at the same time work on a collective model of society.

As well we send our solidarity and our brightest smile to the people who are in jail and remain resisting. We have not forgotten you.

Here and everywhere nothing is over everything continues!

Long live anarchist solidarity!
Fire to the facists and their alliances!
Solidarity with the Basel 18!
Solidarity with the revolutionary forces of Rojava!

Freiburg, Germany: Burn All Prisons and Those Who Build Them

During the night of Thursday, 24.10.2019, an Implenia Group company car was torched on the Tullastraße in Freiburg im Breisgau. Implenia is one of the largest construction companies in Switzerland and is internationally active. In Switzerland, the company is famous for the construction of the Bässlergut deportation prison. The Bässlergut is a prison with a penal system and deportation detention directly on the border with Germany. As part of the new legislation, part of it has now been converted into a so-called federal camp. These are further steps in the authoritarian management of refugees in Switzerland, in which the mass processing of people takes place in a centralized manner. Registration, administration and deportation is the motto.

Implenia is currently building an extension of the prison and is thus making a direct contribution to the expansion of the federal prison system. Over the past two years, Implenia has therefore repeatedly been the target of actions directed against a world of walls and borders. Unfortunately, these actions remain isolated in Switzerland and individual cities such as Berlin. We would like to spread this fight, draw attention to it and motivate more groups to focus on the prison profiteers.

The Squatting Days are currently taking place here in Freiburg. Houses are occupied and the profiteers of vacancy and gentrification are shown that they can no longer continue their inhuman work undisturbed. Whether it is repression through revaluation and eviction or through justice and imprisonment, the logic behind it is always the same.

Fiery greetings to the Anti-Prison Days in Berlin and Warsaw and to everyone behind the walls!

Neu-Isenburg, Germany: Siemens company truck torched

Yesterday, in the night of 24.4.2021 we set a SIEMENS company transporter in Neu-Isenburg on fire with an incendiary device. We ensured that people would not be injured and that other vehicles would not come to harm.

We see ourselves as part of a worldwide movement that strives for a revolutionary upheaval. Therefore, we have decided to carry the struggle of the Kurdish freedom movement here as well. We live in the same oppressive system that fights ideas of a liberated society and cooperates with fascism.

The lived utopia of the liberated areas in Rojava has an enormous radiance with its steps to overcome capitalism and patriarchy. In their lived practice we see many of our feminist utopias implemented and taken further. In the never-ending revolution, an ecology-conscious economy and new society is being built.

We need these places of reinvention, we need these places that show us concrete alternatives. And we are aware that they will therefore always be a thorn in the side of the rulers. No state in globalized capitalism will allow an alternative and will therefore always fight it with violence and propaganda. Here, our protests, occupied houses and organizational structures are fought with repression. The revolution in Northern Kurdistan is fought with drones and bombs. In the process, from the belly of the beast, we are cooperating with fascist regimes like Turkey, supplying weapons and profiting from the war. In Rojava, the low-intensity war continues daily, with drones flying over the cities every day in an attempt to crush the hopes of the people. Meanwhile, the next large-scale attack is being prepared diplomatically and militarily.

Like the fighters in the mountains and Kurdish villages, we choose the means of self-defense. These are the same dreams that we have to defend together against the capitalist system and its war technology!
Here in the metropolises there are companies that earn money from surveillance and military industries, that put people in great suffering in wars and fight uprisings. One of these companies is SIEMENS.

The corporation has traditionally been involved in the arms industry and in equipping governments in various ways. Already in World War II, SIEMENS supplied the Wehrmacht with electrical equipment and enslaved at least 50,000 forced laborers and concentration camp prisoners to work for them.

In the U.S., it has a subsidiary called Siemens Government Technologies. SGT provides „digitization and modernization concepts“ for U.S. military bases and government buildings, working closely with the Pentagon and other U.S. departments. The company is also directly involved in the defense business. Dresser-Rand is a group of engineering companies belonging to SIEMENS Energy. Its main products are turbomachinery such as steam turbines, gas turbines and compressors in the medium and larger power range. However, Dresser-Rand is also an engineering supplier for hundreds of U.S. Navy ships, all nuclear submarines, and all aircraft carriers with steam and gas turbines and compressors.

SIEMENS PLM also produces software for the aerospace and defense industry; these are mostly control systems for the communication of various components of weapons systems or the like. The group is heavily involved in software solutions for 3D printing processes used in the defense industry.

SIEMENS also builds the laser radar system „Albis“ for guns and generators in warships and tanks.

SIEMENS has received extensive orders for the infrastructure of Turkish fascism in recent years. This includes the construction of the largest wind turbine park in Turkey. SIEMENS is cooperating with „Türkerler-Kalyon“ for this purpose and is building, among other things, a factory for the construction of wind turbines in Turkey. The company is investing around $1 billion for this. SIEMENS AG is also hoping to receive 35 billion euros for the construction of a high-speed rail network in Turkey. Turkey has set itself the goal of being an international rail freight hub, under the slogan „Resurrection of the ancient Silk Road“.

New high-speed railroads and trains are to be built on the tracks of the historic Berlin-Baghdad railroad in Turkey. The first 300 km/h Velaro high-speed train built by SIEMENS was able to start operation in February 2015 on the Ankara-Konya line. The necessary investments are supported by loans from the European Bank for Development and Reconstruction and the European Investment Bank (EIB), among others.
In addition, the Turkish Navy purchased U.S. type „Perry“ submarines, which incorporate the SIEMENS „Albis“ radar system and „Dresser-Rand“ turbines.

Until 2010, the Group held a 49% stake in tank manufacturer Kraus-Maffei-Wegmann. It is interesting to note that in 2007 and 2008, shortly before the sale by SIEMENS, the largest deliveries of Leopard 2 tanks to Turkey took place. As a result, KMW experienced a large increase in value, which gave SIEMENS greater profits when it sold its shares.

Therefore, with a burning SIEMENS car, we send a sign against belligerent capitalism in general and the support of fascist Turkey in particular. We will defend the revolution everywhere!

„They can cut off the flowers, they will not be able to stop the spring. “

Bexwedan Jiyane! Resistance is life!

Berlin: Attack Against Deutsche Telekom & Nissan – From Berlin to Greece & Worldwide – Fire and Flames to the State, Capital and the Bosses!

In the morning hours of 13th of December 2019, we set fire to five company cars and one radio antenna on the Deutsche Telekom premises at Hannemannstraße in Berlin-Britz as well as to two cars in front of the Nissan car dealership at Gärtnerstraße in Berlin-Alt-Hohenschönhausen.

Our attacks are aimed at two companies that are globally involved in securing the rule of power and enriching themselves by it, including in Greece, where the current government is threatening to evict all occupied houses and social centers and where those who do not allow themselves to be pushed into the neoliberal norm are subject to massive attacks by the state:

→ Deutsche Telekom, as the biggest European company for Telecommunications, which, profiting from the crisis, bought parts of the former state company Hellenic Telecommunications Organization S.A. (Greek: OTE A.E.) and is now a 45% shareholder. With its subsidiary T-Systems, the Deutsche Telekom is worldwide leading in service for security authorities, industry and the energy sector.

→ Nissan, as a company, which supplies the Greek repression authorities. In June 2019 four Nissan Qashqai Diesel 4×4 and two Nissan Navara for the Criminal Investigation Unit (Δ.Ε.Ε. Διεύθυνση Εγκληματολογικών Ερευνών – forensic division) as well as one Nissan NV400 for the anti-riotcops
(M.A.T. – Μονάδες Αποκατάστασης Τάξης – Monades Apokatastasis Taxis) were ceremonially granted to the cops in front of their academy in Amygdaleza, in the north of Athens.

We chose this moment because it was in December 2008, when the assassination of Alexis by the cop Korkoneas in Exarchia, Athens, triggered a social revolt that was accompanied by a multitude of international attacks on the symbols of state and capital and their murderous functionaries.

11 years later, living conditions have not improved either here or there. Rather, the social war is intensifying worldwide. The gap between rich and poor continues to widen. The triumphant march of neoliberalism produces a mass of excluded people who are denied the possibility of social participation. Expelled and parked on the margins of the metropolis or in slums, they are declared enemies, who should be monitored and oppressed. Walls and fences, private security services, intelligent cameras and highly equipped police units are the clearest expression of an increasingly militarized territory in which, under the disguise of security, war is being waged against the poor.

New technologies and the associated digital access to our lives enable new and more subtle techniques of governance. The thousands and thousands of data that are produced every day are intended to make any action calculable and controllable. With Predictive Policing, the foresighted cop, a tool was created that sorts people according to stereotypes and thus creates the criminals of the future. Such technologies are embedded in the restructuring of cities into Smart Cities, the implementation of which companies such as Deutsche Telekom are constantly working on with 5G infrastructure projects or smart traffic systems, lanterns, waste management and much more. However, this is by no means to enable a better life for all, but to enable the totalitarian idea of comprehensive control of the city and its population through practical solutions.

The technological attack is so successful because humans are actually collective beings. Part of the neo-liberal agenda was and is the destruction of this very collectivity in order to reassemble it in line with the market through digital domination. Driven by the fear of being excluded, even outlawed, and by the supposed joys that Virtual Reality has to offer us, we ourselves weave on the net that encloses us. The state of isolation in the cities or the disregard of rural communities leads many into the arms of the constructed national community and therefore parties like the AfD get a influx of followers. Fighting the rise of fascism by integrating ideas of solidarity and collectivity into social struggles, is therefore certainly a task for the coming time.

As it is happening in other countries at the moment, the abolished leftist government in Greece has prepared the ground for the new rise of a right-wing conservative regime. The past phase of Syriza’s government should have clearly demonstrated to those in doubt that participation in power must fulfill the conditions of capitalist constraints and that no emancipatory project can stand on democratic parliamentary feet. To name these contradictions, to reject any domination by others, not to compromise and not to recognize the authority of a hostile system are part of the anarchist idea.

We feel connected with the rebels worldwide, who are currently in many different places in the world, especially where the state-social partnership is not developed to the smallest detail, those who let the sparks of resistance grow into a widespread fire of social uprising. While in Athens self-organized and revolutionary structures are being defended and state and capital being attacked, we are fighting the same struggle here, in which we aim at the profiteers of capitalist domination. We do this with the consciousness that the infrastructure and the flow of goods are elementary components of it. We send our flaming greetings especially to those who fight against the regime of Nea Demokratia in Greece as well as worldwide to all those people who revolt against authority, are in prison for it or who have to flee.

No Border No Nation – Fire at a defense company in Berlin

Nissan is one of the largest internationally active manufacturers of operation vehicles for police forces, private security companies and the military. At the moment, vans and off-road vehicles from the Japanese group are products that stand up to the competition on the market.
For example, the Hellenic Police recently announced that it would make the Nissan Qashqai the new main model of its vehicle fleet. 790 of these jeeps have been ordered from Nissan. They will be used especially for border protection in rural areas, but also for special units such as "OPKE". Furthermore, the ND (Nea Demokratia) regime has ordered new and smaller vans from Nissan in order to show more presence in the winding streets of the cities, where the hunt for people is no less intense.

On these vehicles is the blood of countless people, to whom the EU and the Greek state offer nothing but jail and death on their escape routes. Also the blood of our comrades, which resist the new junta. And so the blood is also on the hands of those responsible at Nissan. We will make them pay dearly for this.

In Germany, too, the war against migrants continues unabated. Just last Wednesday, hundreds of people were deported to Afghanistan via Berlin. To a country whose population has been brought into one bloody conflict after another, which has cost countless people their lives, not only since September 11, 2001. We are not interested in whether a country is "safe" or "unsafe", we reject the idea of its borders and everything that goes along with them.

Therefore, in the first hours of 14/4/21, we entered the premises of the Nissan base on Wendenschloss Street in Berlin-Köpenick and caused a fire that disabled or destroyed twenty new vehicles, mostly SUVs.

Greetings to all who are trying to break the European borders.
To all those who have been taking to the streets for months against the fascist methods of Nea Dimokratia.

To the airport blockers in Schönefeld and all the determined ones like those in Hannover (2) who make the deportation authorities pay dearly.

By the way, the Greek government is spending a total of 31,000,000 euros on the most extensive procurement program for its police force in years, of which the EU is contributing just under 6,000,000 euros: https://www.iefimerida.gr/ellada/programma-31-ekat-gia-elas-gileka-peripolika

Piraeus: Incendiary attack on G4S security company vehicle

“And just a little bit below the number of your repression, they had opened a penetrating hole, the same size as a submachine gun, from where the enemy overtly stripped you down day and night in the most ruthless way, and killed whatever you held secret and kept inside you. From there, they fired their murderous bursts incessantly upon you, and raked your body in its most sacred and inviolable moments. It’s the hole through which your enemy vomited out their worst kind of hatred with the worst rabies. It’s the relentless, most tyrannical controller and the worst killer of your private, hidden self. (…) It’s the spy hole, which tore apart the most unsuspected, the most own or private time of yours; as soon as you saw the glossy, cold eye of the hangman-checker peering through the slot and permeating your inner being. (…) Oh resentful eye, how I wish to seal you once and for all! To permanently end the sinister stripping and rapine of the soul in the hands of executioners. Oh snitch of my most intimate gestures, how I hate you, and how I yearn for your death! Your destruction! Your doom!”

In the early morning hours of Tuesday, April 29th, 2014 we torched a technical services car of the G4S security company (formerly Group 4 Securicor) at the junction of Karaiskaki and Smyrnis streets in the Rentis-Nikaia region.

This company is one of the largest operators of the private parapolice institution worldwide. It operates and manages private prisons in England and America while being responsible for security systems at the “wall of shame” in Palestine. In Greece, it has the largest fleet of armored cash-in-transit vehicles, to safely transport the wealth of banks and other businesses, it has equipped most of the country’s prisons with the latest electronic security systems, and will assume the management and operation of concentration camps for migrants.

Our action is part of the promotion of activities against the Greek government’s intention to pass the new bill for special conditions of detention and maximum security facilities in the Domokos prison.

Solidarity with imprisoned and prosecuted fighters.

Struggle until freedom, against the modern totalitarianism, by any means necessary.

“Woe to those who will accept prison as a life condition”

Montevideo (Uruguay) : Attaque incendiaire d’un véhicule d’une entreprise de sécurité

Dans la nuit de mardi 3 février 2020, on a « déjoué » la « sécurité » de l’entreprise de « sécurité » privée G4S [une des plus grandes entreprises de sécurité au monde, elle gère des prisons et des camps pour sans papiers, notamment au Royaume-Uni ; NdAtt.], et on a incendié un de ses véhicules, au carrefour des rues Cufré et Cagancha, en le détruisant complètement.
Peu importe le nombre de caméras qu’ils installent, ni qu’ils se croient en sécurité, ils n’arrêteront jamais la lutte !
Allumons la mèche de la résistance,

[Madrid] Quema de vehículo de seguridad: la necesidad de atacar

La madrugada del 10 al 11 de septiembre 2019, un vehículo de la empresa Securitas Direct era incendiado en vallekas (Madrid). En nuestra mente los mismos pensamientos que los emitidos por unos compañeros anónimos en París, decidimos emprender el ataque, como auténtica emergencia:
«…Nosotros creemos que la urgencia, hoy como siempre, es actuar. Actuar en pequeños grupos o a solas, siguiendo nuestras ideas y no el humor de las masas. La urgencia del ataque. Identificar al enemigo: como ayer y como mañana, los Estados, el capital y toda autoridad.»
¡Fuerza a las que resisten a Desokupa, empresas de seguridad, propietarios y maderos!

¡Fuerza a los compas de Hamburgo, Italia, Barcelona, Madrid, Grecia… que encaran la lucha en distintos procesos represivos!

Barcelona, Spanish State: Arson Attack Against Security Company Prosegur – 2 Vehicles Torched

Barcelona, early morning of 04.07.19. Two Prosegur company vehicles were torched at the end of Vilanova avenue. A fiery greeting to all the indomitable against the prisons and prison society, especially for Anna, Silvia and all the comrades who joined the hunger strike that recently ended. Greetings also to the prisoners who are mobilizing in the Spanish State.

Spie

Paris: SPIE - Portrait d’un collabo tout-terrain

SPIE (Société parisienne pour l’industrie électrique) est une société spécialisée dans les « domaines du génie électrique, mécanique et climatique, de l’énergie, et des réseaux de communication ». En 2012 elle a fait un chiffre d’affaire de près de 4,2 milliards d’euros. On retrouve ses nombreuses filiales dans les chantiers et usines qui sont bien à l’image de ce que ce monde de merde peut produire : plate-formes offshore, construction de taules, centres commerciaux, raffineries, lignes de haute tension, centrales photovoltaïques, installation de la fibre optique, centrales nucléaires, et même à l’étranger : Maroc, Pays Bas, Belgique, Gabon, Indonésie, etc …

On peut citer trois de ses filiales, parmi les nombreuses existantes : SPIE Communications, spécialisée dans les domaines de l’informatique, des télécommunications, des réseaux et des systèmes de sécurité. SPIE Oil & Gas Services, spécialisée dans le domaine de l’industrie pétrolière. SPIE Nucléaire, spécialisée dans le nucléaire.

Dorénavant, l’entreprise profite également du juteux business de l’enfermement. SPIE a participé à la réalisation de la prison de Leuze, en Belgique (inaugurée en août dernier).

Pour continuer de dresser le portrait de cette entreprise pourrie on peut citer le Morocco Mall de Casablanca (un gigantesque centre commercial, où SPIE a fait l’installation électrique, et bien sûr des caméras), la traversée du lac Léman en fibre optique, l’EPR de Flamanville (en collaboration avec EDF), le Mucem de Marseille, etc. Et le groupe se targue même de continuer de valoriser les énergies fossiles en apportant son soutien aux mafieux pétroliers et gaziers dans leurs projets d’exploration et d’exploitation.

On retrouve cette même entreprise dans des centrales thermiques, des abattoirs, des parcs éoliens, chez Total, Sanofi, etc.

SPIE participe à notre contrôle et à notre enfermement, à produire des énergies toujours plus néfastes, et à créer des lieux d’abrutissement et de consommation.

En bref, SPIE contribue largement à rendre ce monde chaque jour plus moche et nos vies chaque fois plus insupportables. Et il semblerait que cette entreprise ne fasse pas l’unanimité chez tout le monde. Pour preuve, à Paris, dans la nuit du 11 au 12 février 2014, dans la rue Carducci (XIXe), un utilitaire de l’entreprise SPIE part complètement en fumée, et le mardi 13 mai 2014, un autre utilitaire est incendié rue de Mouzaïa (dans le XIXe). Dans les deux cas les attaques sont revendiquées par refus du contrôle social auquel SPIE participe par la mise en place de caméras, et aussi pour sa participation à l’industrie nucléaire.

Hamburg, Germany: SPIE Vehicle Torched in Solidarity with the Park Bench 3 & Rebellious Neighborhoods

Undoubtedly, the spaces in which we can move freely sometimes become narrower:

In Hamburg, where the special commissions announce in the media the alleged success of their surveillance teams, their video analyses, DNA sniffing and informer hotlines – everything to re-establish the illusion of their security that they lost in the Summer of 2017.
In Berlin, where every space is supposedly a terror nest, where people take their lives into their own hands instead of entrusting it to investors and real estate companies. Where the media present their puppet Interior Senator who hides his civil war army more democratically than his predecessor.

In Athens, where a fascist government finally wants to implement the purges that its EU and NATO partners have waited so long for. So that the city will become another paradise for investors and tourists. Like some districts in Hamburg, like some districts in Berlin and like every place where the modern form of capitalism eats through districts that are not yet as boring as the exclusive residences as the elites.

To secure its rule, the state relies on corporations to do their dirty work. But the fiery serpent of the anarchist revolt eats its way through these controversial territories on the trail of these companies, destroying whatever it finds.

On the night of September 4th, 2019, we destroyed with fire a vehicle belonging to the infamous prison profiteers SPIE in Hamburg-Wandsbeck.

This small gesture of solidarity goes to the Park Bench 3, to the people who defend Exarcheia against the attacks by the cops and to all who want to make the expected evictions in Berlin a disaster for the government there.

Berlin: Solidarity to Nantes – SPIE van torched

The wave of exuberant hatred for the arbitrariness of uniformed individuals spills once more across the borders of France to us. For the last two nights in Nantes, hundreds of teenagers have destroyed shops, set fire to cars and attacked the CRS (Compagnies Républicaines de Sécurité / general reserve of the French National Police) with Molotovs.

Aboubakar was executed on Tuesday night in a suburb of Nantes in his car by a police officer after he was placed under arrest during a vehicle inspection…

The police spread their version that they were in danger and it was in self-defense. It is obvious that the ‘legitimacy’ of the murder that they make public is found only in the self-created legitimacy of the police apparatus. Since we refuse to recognize that law, there can never be legitimacy for execution by a cop.

It was only a few months ago that we received sad news from this region. A comrade lost his hand in the battles for the ZAD and his entire upper body is still seriously injured. An explosive grenade hit him, fired by the riot cops of the CRS.

These moments, when it becomes obvious which side we stand on and which side those who wear uniforms stand, often feel like a state of powerlessness. Time stops and everything inside oneself builds up with hate and frustration. Everything either seems doomed to failure, as one is frustrated by the omnipotence of the state and the ability of the police to end a life at any time. Or, you break out of this feeling and make it visible, you release your anger, the feelings to these thoughts and show solidarity with those who are on the same side.

To express our solidarity with the resisters of the suburbs we torched a vehicle belonging to the prison service provider SPIE last night, (5. Juli 2018).

The news about the use of firearms or executions by police officers due to their loyalty to the state, their mania for regulation or their racism, has also been on the rise in Berlin lately. It is permanent scandalous news that often gets lost in the media frenzy.

Let’s not give our enemies a moment to catch their breath! Only a life of attack can prevent us from resigning to these power relations.

In memory of all those affected by police violence!
Love and strength to all prisoners in the dungeons of the state!
Stay strong!

Nantes : Arson Attack Against a Truck Belonging to Prison Construction Company Spie

Destroy the Prison Society

Spie is a company that builds prisons and more broadly is an essential wheel in the machinery that controls us, monitors us, imprisons us and deports us. So I destroyed one of their trucks this Tuesday, October 16th 2018, between 3 and 4AM on Captain André David street in Nantes. 2 plastic bottles filled with a mixture of 2/3 gasoline and a third of engine oil, with blocks of lighters cellotaped against the bottle and placed behind the tires. Then there is more to light and ciao, hasta la malekoum…

Freedom for everyone, with or without papers!

A madman against the state and its minions

Restructuring power via digitization is in full swing. Hardly anything that cannot be complemented by a ‘smart’ in its name and thus a new place in this world has escaped this process. Everything is networked. Cameras, sensors and chips are constantly sending and letting things communicate. ‘Big Data’ is the currency of tomorrow. Even our relationships, actions and thinking are permanently exposed to digital access. Reduced to information, we feed the algorithms of the machines, helping to make the future manageable and controllable.

It’s not always easy to hold on to the possibility of destroying this system as the rapid pace of the technological attack is widening and the net of domination stretches around us. All the more important are the moments of counterattack to reject the powerlessness that is spreading in the face of current developments. So we are all the more pleased that the answers to the misery produced by the colonization of the world via techno-industrial hegemony are found again and again in Berlin. Within the context of the planned Google campus in Kreuzberg, a fight has developed that is not only aimed at the tech giants and their universe, but also at the social level. Self-organization, direct communication and the power of the attack are the means of choice. Various acts of sabotage, such as the one last March by ‘Vulkangruppe NetzHerrschaft zerreißen’ have shown that the infrastructure of the flow of goods, communication and data networks is vulnerable and can be disrupted by arson attacks against cable networks and sensitive radio antennas. But other actors in the city’s and life’s smartification have also become the target of anger, such as the torched Amazon vehicles, the Molotov attack against the start-up factory, the attacks against Zalando or the Humboldthain Technology Park, and so on. We want to fuel these conflicts with our contribution by picking out some well-known players who are actively working to expand and optimize the web of domination and control.

And so, on the night of June 14th in the Tiergarten, just before the start of the public sports broadcast there, we set fire to the cables and control boxes of a Vodafone radio antenna. This antenna is used in addition to mobile radio for the BOS radio of the cops and other authorities. We are optimistic that our intervention at this antenna at least allowed a transmission break, so that for a moment it would have provided radio silence. The cop ticker went silent, perhaps this info on the way to the headquarters in the charred cables that now adorn the system, stuck.

On the night of June 15th, we torched Deutsche Bahn’s vehicle fleet on Kaskel street, and on the night of June 19th, we placed incendiary devices under Telekom’s cars on Sewan street, transporting six more vehicles to the junkyard. With these attacks, we are targeting some of the largest network operators in Germany, which form important pillars of the flow of goods and data.
via radio antennas, fiber optic cables and the rail network. These are indispensable to the functioning of capitalism. All three companies, however, do far more than just provide the infrastructure. With their technological developments in monitoring, control, Internet of Things (IoT), Industry 4.0, Smart City, Smart Home etc, they are a driving force in the reorganization of rule in the cybernetic age.

With these actions, we send smoke signals to all prisoners of the social war and to those on the run. Special greetings go to Lisa, Thomas, Nero, Isa and the UP3 and G20 prisoners.

Mobile and public transport in the service of power

Media and political insiders and lobbyists have stirred a mood of fear for years. Fear of the stranger, the refugees and terrorism. This is accompanied by the call for authority. A new police law chases the other. The developers of security technologies are pleased, because with the fear, they can not only make politics, but also earn a lot of money. It is therefore not surprising that large established corporations are at the forefront of this and, in the interests of domination, inexorably participate in the maintenance of the existing order.

Telekom is the largest telecommunications company in Europe and operates technical networks for telephone, mobile, data transfer and online services. In addition to Germany, the company has subsidiaries in 14 other European countries where it is involved in mobile and fixed network providers. With its internationally operating subsidiary T-Systems, the group is one of the world’s leading providers of information and communication technology, aimed at large-scale customers, the financial sector, the energy sector and public administration and security.

For police, military and other security authorities, T-Systems offers comprehensive solutions and information technology. Under the title ‘PLX’, Deutsche Telekom is developing, among other things, an information and search system for the police, in which all relevant reporting processes, such as facial recognition services, detention data, criminal record evidence etc are integrated. In this way, all processes in the handling of transactions, from initial registration to submission of the proceedings to the judiciary, are to be supported.

In addition, T-Systems offers technology for an ‘Interactive Patrol Car Radio (IfuStw)’. A mobile police workplace with multifunction PCs in the vehicle, which enables full integration into the existing police infra and communication structure. These links are designed to reduce reaction and intervention times while facilitating evidence-securing documentation via video capture.

Vodafone, the German subsidiary of the British Vodafone Group and Germany’s second largest mobile service provider, is also campaigning for greater security. Vodafone not only provides a messenger service for the Bavarian police and body cams for the Federal Police, but also develops smart drones. This drone, equipped with onboard camera and SIM card for LTE radio, delivers and analyzes video material in real time. This could be used at major events, for example counting people or observing and directing streams of people. Traffic monitoring and license plate recognition are also part of the tasks of such applications. This technique may be arbitrarily replaced by other monitoring software, for example facial recognition could obviously be added.

With these and similar products, Telekom and Vodafone, along with many other companies in the security industry, have been exhibiting at trade fairs such as the European Police Congress for many years, where they care about competing for their military, police, intelligence and border control customers.

In contrast, Deutsche Bahn, as the operator of railway stations and the German railway network, is more likely to play the role of a consumer of such technologies. At the same time, the group’s infrastructure also offers a huge field of experimentation to test the use of the latest surveillance technologies under real conditions. The most popular field trial by Deutsche Bahn, in cooperation with the Federal Police, the BKA and the Federal Ministry of the Interior, is currently running at the Südkreuz railway station in Berlin. There, smart video cameras with inbuilt facial recognition software are designed to automatically detect, track and report suspicious behavior. With such projects, they lay the groundwork for a totalitarian society of control. Of course, if the results are positive for the operators, such technologies will also be used in other locations. Already, 900
Deutsche Bahn stations are being monitored with 6000 video cameras, which, equipped with smart surveillance software, in the spirit of the Minister of the Interior, would enable a near-complete network of personalized tracking and control on public transport. So, this group plays a key role in the implementation of new surveillance and prosecution paragraphs, as they occur in the new Bavarian Police Task Force (PAG).

From the Internet of Things to the Smart City and back

The Internet of Things is considered to be the largest growth sector in mobile communications. Experts expect up to 50 billion interconnected devices worldwide. This requires powerful networks that can rapidly exchange large amounts of data. As a result, wireless carriers are investing massive amounts of money into fiber optic cable, Narrowband and 5G infrastructure to meet their current and future needs. At the same time, they are actively involved in various European Smart City projects and develop all sorts of things to help make the totally networked world a reality.

Telekom operates a so-called ‘Hub: raum’ as an incubator for start-ups and runs programs under the title ‘Smart City Lab / T-Labs’, to promote the digital efficiency of cities. Smart Transportation Solutions, Smart Parking, Smart Electric Vehicle Charging, Traffic and Passenger Management Systems, Smart Waste Management, Smart Lighting, Smart Metering and Smart Public Safety are just a few of the key words that show how comprehensive the corporation’s plans to make things happen are and which information can be produced and integrated into the profit chain. Telekom’s goal is to be a leading provider of smart city solutions in Europe. In doing so, they say they are committed to the environment and promise to address such issues as climate change, scarcity of resources, demographic change etc, in order to enable human survival on Earth for a long time. The fact that the destruction of the planet is result of the capitalist logic that reaps horrendous profits for companies goes unmentioned.
At Vodafone, along with safety and economic efficiency, the concerns of ecology are at the forefront of their Smart City projects. Together with the RWE ‘eco’ subsidiary Innogy, the group is developing concepts for the smart city. Connected traffic systems, smart waste management and smart lighting systems are the three main cornerstones of the company cooperation. Smart multifunction pylons with the name ‘Innogized Poles’ are equipped with sensors and devices to provide comprehensive solutions for urban networking. On the one hand, these could serve as charging stations for all types of e-vehicles that measure air pollution and temperature and produce digital advertising on LED screens. On the other hand, they could also simplify surveillance via smart video cameras in public spaces. Another product from Vodafone is the smart wall. Sensors can not only detect movement, but also chemical substances and individual spray paint particles. If a wall is sprayed, the sensor will automatically alert the authorities. Vodafone is also producing technologies that can be integrated directly into our everyday lives as surveillance devices. With ‘Smart Level Glasses’, which were developed in cooperation with the US manufacturer CSP, the group offers glasses that are full of smart technology. These would function primarily as a fitness monitor, but also contain tracking functions. A step-by-step ranking system, which supports social projects and the needy once you reach a certain score, is an incentive for people to use the glasses permanently. So the emotional blackmail of the data consumer is also included.

With these and similar applications, corporations are making it clear in which direction the processes of smartification are actually developing. What are sold to us as benefits for everyday life in the name of ecology, turn out to be green capitalism in its purest form. It’s about power and money. And so the devastation will spread inexorably and our habitats will gradually become places of total control. What remains for us is to hold on to the idea of another way of life and the possibility of destroying this world of domination and control, and translating it into action.

Thessaloniki: SOLIDARITY ATTACK CLAIM

Technology has always been a strong ally of domination. Today, however, one could say that it is one of its most important weapons. So technology has flooded every corner of our daily lives. “Smart phones”, “Smart watches”, “Smart homes”, even “Smart cities”. Everything ready and arranged for our convenience. Behind this apparent convenience we have been given, there is huge business. A massive collection of information on each individual. Mobile phone companies clearly have their place of honour in this situation. Always available to hand over conversations, messages and any other information they have, they have proved their good cooperation with the institutions of power many times.

One of these times was the dystopian period 2020-2021. At the first warning of “mass imprisonment”, these companies hurried to comfort the people with packages of offers to gild the pill of each person, who had to stay home at all costs. Still, they have been and are one of the most basic means of social control, as movement is allowed mainly by sms, while at any time the civil protection have the ability to send out messages, with ridiculous sirens blaring.

Beyond this social context and the pandemic situation, we are well aware that these companies provide the “desired” information to the cops when they want to file new lawsuits and open new rounds of prosecution. Interceptions of telephone conversations, surveillance of people through cell phone spots, have often been elements of indictments of fighters / slaves, cut and sewn to the preferences of state security. In every corner of the globe, this cooperation has helped the current power to locate its enemies, imprison them and try to exterminate them in every way. Our hatred for this rotten world is tearing your borders apart, tearing down your antennas and leaving only smoke, sending our solidarity signals. So, on Sunday, April 25 2021, we set fire to a COSMOTE car (TELEFONE COMUNICATIONS COMPANY), on 25th of March Street in Triandria.

We dedicate the action to the comrades Monica, Marcelo, Joaquin, Juan, Pablo, Jose, Tomas, Gonzalo who started a hunger strike on March 22 in the infernal prisons of Chile with demands: –

The repeal of Article 9 and the restoration of Article 1 of Decree 321, which regulates “conditional release (conditional release of a prisoner)”, turning the right into a privilege –

The release of comrade Marcelo, who has been imprisoned for more than 25 years, for actions against the state and capital

The end of the pre-trial detention of the accused for actions in the context of the uprising that lasts until the conviction. -The rejection of the convictions for Marcelo and Juan, which were based on torture, without having the right to defend themselves.

We see the enemy worldwide constantly upgrading its means, for targeting individuals and for repression. So let us not turn our backs on thinking that it is far from our own reality. So let’s organize, arm our thoughts and desires, so that we become this dangerous flame that will be feared will burn at some point by those trying in every way to extinguish it.

Berlin: A message to our unknown comrades in the urban jungle of prison society

The burning of security vehicles in Berlin as a useful tool of communication.

By quoting from other responsibility claims, we follow the proposal of relating to each other in order to develop a wider mobilisation of the militant groups in Europe as well as to develop our theoretical base.

We recognized your words about solidarity and we share it, when Rouvikonas wrote about the attack at the Saudi Arabian embassy at Athens 19/12/2017:

“As anarchists we know that the only definitive answer lies on internationalist solidarity between organized, struggling oppressed peoples. We are under no illusions that at this point the still infant solidarity can overturn the plans of the global rulers. Under current circumstances what can be achieved is giving small battles, there where it is possible, in order to sabotage the war process that is under way. [This is necessary in order] to preserve social awareness, [in order] to be capitalized in case avoiding hell becomes inevitable”.

Some people in Rome express our thoughts when they claimed as Santiago Maldonado Cell FAI-IRF the Explosive Attack Against a Carabinieri Police Station in San Giovanni:

“Who wants to watch will continue to watch. Who wants to justify politically not acting will continue not doing so. We are not waiting for any train of hope, we do not wait for better times. Conditions move with the confrontation. The movement is such if it acts, otherwise it stands still. The liberation of the individual from authority and exploitation is carried out by those directly concerned.

Direct destructive action is the logical response to repression. But not solely. Anarchist praxis is also a revival, a proposal that goes beyond solidarity, breaking the spiral of repression-action-repression. Solidarity actions are important, but we cannot confine ourselves to the critique, however armed, of some oppressive operation or process.

Hit where they do not expect you. Today we struck in the heart of the militarized capital to challenge the delusions of security. Tomorrow, who knows, maybe in the suburbs where you least expect it. We do not make truces, we chose our own times. This has always been the principle of the metropolitan guerrilla.

With this action we launch an international campaign against the representatives, structures and means of repression. Anybody can contribute to this campaign using whatever tools they consider to be the most appropriate”.

We like to not only talk about the enemy but about us, like some comrades when they attacked the gendarmerie in Meylan/ France:

“Because we do not want to remain in the position of victims that society would like to categorize us by recognizing us as women. Victims, because we would not be able to be autonomous, to defend ourselves, to lead our lives as we see fit. We would be weak individuals, too sensitive, subject to hormonal moods, dependent and fragile. We would need strong figures to rescue us, doctors to look after us, children to nurture, cops to protect us.
We prepare our revenge for all the times that we were discouraged by persuading ourselves that we were not capable, that we did not have either the skills, the strength nor the means to defuse the logic that causes us to postpone forever the moment to express our anger and our desires.

We targeted the private cars of the cops, to the indignation of the press, because we wanted to attack the individuals who wear the uniforms rather than their function, their personal property rather than their tools of work. We think that roles exist because there are people to fill them. If behind every uniform there is a human, then that is who we sought to harm.

We are convinced that our limitations are both psychological and social, that in assuming these roles we become our own cops. By organizing in affinity, and by attacking, we push these limitations”.

Sometimes it is nessesary to define the frame in which we act, so did anarchists in Bar-le-Duc, when they spent a lot of rage and some flames at ENEDIS car park:

“In recent months, several attacks against ENEDIS have been claimed, we wanted to echo them, it made us happy, and ours is a nod to the people who came into play in order to carry them out.

We believe that there is no need to wait to be many to attack, that only a few can also do so, the possibilities are different, but no less pleasing. We welcome the recent attacks on the relay antennas, which open up new prospects for direct action”.

In the morning hours of March 6th we attacked the delusion of security in Berlin. Even in times that we are a few, we can organize ourselves instead of waiting for an opportunity that is given to us by the so called ‘organizers of the movement’ or just to react on another attack by authorities. We can act and choose our moments on our own.

Everyday we are told to remain silent, governed by the state and its institutions that secure the capitalist world. People fill their minds with stupid stuff, head down staring on their smartphones only to look away when an inspector is controlling tickets in the train, when a pig is telling a homeless person to go away where he just found a warm place, when German arms are murdering Kurdish people in Erdogan’s genocidal war. For now we targeted security companies but any other company, upholding the capitalist and authoritarian structures, can be the target. Any night can be a night of attack.

We burned cars from Bosch and Tyco in Berlin-Pankow, Bosch is a well known security company. Its technology is in many surveillance installations, in pig stations, prisons, border fences, CCTV equipment…

Tyco is a company which runs the alarm installations in prisons with so called ‘Business Logic Engines’. They give prison guards the opportunities of the smart city – tracking of prisoners by RFID chips.

We send solidarity and rage to the imprisoned and persecuted anti-fascists and anarchists in Russia. We heard your voices, you’re not alone. Though we are not able to physically open the gates of the prisons, anarchist ideas and solidarity overcomes borders, gates and walls and can fill our souls even in times of torture and the hardest repression.

We followed the news about Dinos’s struggle in Greece against the prison administration. With our arsons we support this way of resistance – the announcement from Korydallos prisoners and the threat from affinity groups outside, to attack every day and destroy the city, is the adequate strategy in this confrontation with the state.

This action is also dedicated to Lisa in the prison of Willich and the prisoners of Hambacher Forst resistance.

(Freiburg, Germany: Prison Profiteers Johnson Control Company Car Torched)

During the night of 25-26 October 2019, another car burst into flames in Freiburg im Breisgau on Badenweilerstraße in Freiburg-Weingarten. In the days before, various cars belonging to exploiting profiteers Thyssen & Krupp, Vonovia and Implenia were set on fire.

On this night a vehicle from Johnson Control, which also includes Tyco, was attacked.

Tyco is involved in the prison industry’s profit-making via securtiy systems such as alarm systems and chips used to monitor prisoners.

Companies like Tyco use prisons and the detainees who are kept there unprotected to make huge profits for their own cause. Against this structural machinery of exploitation a fiery signal was set with this nocturnal attack.

Against prisons and capitalism!

Solidarity greetings to all prisoners behind the walls!

(Athens: Attack against surveillance systems company in Kaisariani)

While the garbage in uniforms occupied for another night Exarchia and the center of Athens, to fulfill the dreams of Mr. Chryssochidis of a dead and safe city, our ways lead to a soft target.

The image of George Orwell „1984“ is already reality. The internet of things implements televisions, refrigerators and other electronic stuff in our homes, in order to collect our data, to surveil our habits, to transform human life in digital algorithm. They call it Smart City, we call it a totalitarean society.

A company which sells the hard ware of the smart city and also its ideologie, is the security company „alphacom“ . Alphacom not only provides this, but also cctv technology and other equipment for the rich and for authorities, to protect their interests. And last but not least, alphacom is selling and installing the products of Tyco. Tyco is a multinationnal company, which produces surveillance technologie for prisons worldwide and other security forces.

In the early hours of December 2, we burned the van of alphacom in front of their shop in Kaisariani.

This fire was lit for anarchist prisoner Dino Giagtzoglou, who wrote a letter to the International Meeting against the Techno-Sciences in Italy (July 2019) * in which he mentions many reasons to fight this part of the capitalist powersystem. We welcome the upcoming researches about the players in this game. **

This fire was also lit for Loic, still in prison in Hamburg.
Finally, this attack was made in solidarity and sympathy with those persecuted for the Revolutionary Self-Defense case, as well as those persecuted for good intentions, kinship or friendship. Our strength and solidarity are superior to the politics and repressive operations.

Strength to the comrades Michailidis, Athanassopoulou, Chatzivasileiadis, who are in illegality.

Arson Attack Against Lukashenka's Accomplices: Incendiary Fire at IKEA in Malmö, Sweden

We set fire to IKEA shopping center in Malmö, Sweden on the night of March 24th 2021. The reason for the attack - IKEA's cooperation with the dictatorship of Lukashenka in Belarus.

This action is part of a pressure on Western capitalists who trade with the Lukashenka regime and thereby ensure its survivability. When we were planning the attack, we were inspired by the reflections of the imprisoned anarchist-partisan Igor Olinevich, who wrote in his book “I’m going to Magadan”: “It is ok to trade even with cannibals’ - this is the essence of European politics.” The example of furniture corporation IKEA, based in Sweden and currently registered in the Netherlands, perfectly demonstrates the accuracy and relevance of Igor’s conclusions.

Back in December 2018, in the wake of political rapprochement between the Lukashenka’s regime and the European Union, IKEA has adopted a strategy “Go Belarus.” In the summer of 2019, Belarusian Ambassador to Sweden Dmitry Mironchik told reporters what this strategy is about. According to him, IKEA plans to purchase Belarusian goods with a value of 200 million euros. The same year, in the fall, during a Swedish-Belarusian business meeting in Minsk, Andrei Yevdochenko, at that time the First Deputy Foreign Minister, announced that in 2021, IKEA plans to increase the volume of purchases to 300 million euros.

After the beginning of the Belarusian revolution in August 2020, the Swedish media drew attention to the activities of IKEA in this country. At the end of 2020, it became widely known that seven percent of wood which IKEA uses to manufacture furniture comes from Belarus. This fact once again confirms the accuracy of Igor Olinevic's words. In his book, he described the place of Belarus in the global production chain in following way: “Economically, Belarus is elementary, most environmentally filthy, raw material processing.” As a result of the scandal, the Secretary-General of the Human Rights Organization “Olof Palme International Center,” Anna Sundström, called on the boycott of IKEA products. “Forest and Wood Workers' Union,” which is part of the Social Democratic “Swedish Trade Union Confederation” also demanded from IKEA to terminate cooperation with Lukashenka’s regime. Thus, not only anti-authoritarian left, but also a non-indifferent part of the Swedish society, which follows the situation in Belarus, condemns IKEA’s actions in this country. We, anarchists, believe that these people will understand us, will support us, and will become our comrades.

Here, we will not list other IKEA's misdeeds, such as the destruction of nature in different countries of the world and permanent impairment of workers' conditions. Anyone can easily find information about it. IKEA’s co-operation with the Lukashenka’s regime is a more than enough reason to attack.
As Igor Olinevich and many other anarchists noted, Belarusians should not hope for Western politicians. They will not help. Only people in Belarus, by armed uprising, can destroy the dictatorship. The dirty greedy nature of capitalists, such as IKEA owners, confirms that it is necessary to fight not only for political liberation, but also for the destruction of the economic oppression, for the absolute liberation of the individual.

Lukashenka’s regime trade with his accomplices from other countries needs to be blocked by radical direct action. Therefore, we will continue to attack. The words of Igor Olinovich will inspire us: “There is no linear historical path, everything can be changed!”

Limeil-Brévannes: Freedom, mon amour…

In the department of Val-de-Marne [southern suburb of Paris], the firm OMMC, one of the European leaders in the sector of semiconductors and integrated circuits, can be found.

We heard them boasting about their circuits, which accompany the emitters and receivers of phone repeaters.
We heard them boasting about being specialists in the conception and production of integrated circuits III-V, in arsenide and gallium nitrate, components used mainly in telecommunication equipment, army radars and aerospace satellites.

We heard them boasting of being the first to produce components specially conceived to address frequencies comprised between 28 and 32 Ghz for clients in the space and military sectors.

We heard them boasting about being one of the rare world companies to possess this technology and about having signed contracts with numerous international builders in order to supply the market of base stations and small-cells, necessary to the development of 5G.

We heard them boasting about the fact they are developing the technologies for the next 10 years.

Recently, we heard them congratulating their partners Thalès, CNES [Centre national d’études spatiales, national centre of spatial studies] and NASA, after robot “Perseverance” landed on Mars. They want to persevere in the conquest of space. We are among those who want to persevere in the struggle against the technological conquest of the world and of our lives.

On the contrary, we didn’t hear them after, on Saint Valentine’s night on the 14th of February 2021, when we set fire to one of their buildings, which hosts laboratories where they elaborate and build their precious magic objects.

Direct Action Cells: Public Proposition for the Constitution of a Network of Revolutionary Violence

Public proposition for the constitution of a network of revolutionary violence - Report on the first cycle of incendiary propaganda and call for mobilisation in the Direct Action Cells

“…The jump to a Politics of Fronts is necessary and possible for the fighting forces which aim to effectively determine the conflict. That is why all ideological-dogmatic positions that exist today must fall and be overcome, between the fighting forces and the revolutionary movement, since they divide the fighters. These positions are not capable of leading the struggles and the attack, at the necessary level of political determination. The Front develops around practical attack, in a conscious and organised path in which the next moments of unity of the fighting forces mature. Because to organise the fighting revolutionary front means to organise the attack.”

A Politics of Fronts, Red Army Faction - New Red Brigades/Communist Combatant Party

“They say the first thing that dies at war, is truth”

Wanting to place the above statement in a radical direction, we can say that revolutionary war is the war of truth against its death, in the wars which take place under the blood-soaked flags of power and capitalism. The flags of racism, patriarchy, militarism, imperialist interests, exploitations, techno-totalitarianism.

In the face of these wars, the revolutionary war acquires a specific character. It means our militant opposition to the political-economic and military plans of capitalism and at the same time the restoration of historical legacy and memory of struggle against oblivion, inside the social fields in which we operate. The struggle of the truth of a struggle with a thousand forms that rises against propaganda and the mechanisms of power.

The capitalist crisis is deepening and the contradictions are sharpening. The “end of history” as preached by the apologists of capitalism has not come; on the contrary, the historical bets on the final overcoming of a greedy and inhuman system constantly raise radical questions and arm the struggles that are breaking out all over the world.

The news bulletins, the police announcements, the threats by politicians are not just the voices that spread confusion. It is the institutional representation of the - classist and without limits - violence of the system. It is the uniformed guards who beat us in the demonstrations and in the neighbourhood squares, it is the queues for unemployment benefits, the loose and badly paid hours, the unpaid overtime, the terrorism of capital of us who are part of the new working shift. It is the cops who will enter our universities to control our every move, it is the life they are stealing from us every day demanding more discipline, more working hours, more taxes, more indifference in the face of the authoritarian exploitation of the oppressed.

If we do not decide that we must collectively overcome the obstacle of fear, if we do not prepare to crush them, we are doomed to live our small and daily death to which they have condemned us. In the roads, the prisons, the concentration camps, the psychiatric hospitals, in the metropolitan hard labour of displacement of the surplus labour force. Where the word “right” is a class privilege, where the violence of capital and the state flattens souls and bodies.

It is a permanent conclusion in the discussions between comrades that there is a huge absence of a coherent political plan which, avoiding the traps which we often set ourselves, will manage to put its presence at a central level. Of a political plan which will seek new tools of analysis and communication, organisation and political composition. It will therefore seek ways to organise the revolutionary war adapted to the needs, the analogies and the challenges of our time. Through specific conclusions, so that the actions and the dialectic they feed can set the struggle in motion.

“The memory of fire is the memory of a struggle which constantly explodes”

It is a collective need to describe, with the words brought to the present by the storms of the past, our roots inside time, our collective vision for life and struggle, the perspective we set in our action. Revolutionary action, when it appears at the forefront of history in every era, inevitably connects with, and at the same time transfers to today, its historical political burden. It is the thread of resistance that comes from far away, from places and times where people with steel tenacity tried to bring the beast of each empire to its knees. It is the historic duty towards those who without hesitation fell in the fire of politics and social doubt to feed it, to make it into a fire that will turn revolutionary visions into a rushing river that threatens to sweep the ruling class.

Because contrary to prevailing views, the world anarchist movement was established as a radical force through revolutionary violence, the sacrifices and blood of our comrades, the incessant war on the structures of political, religious and economic power.

We begin with a proclaimed goal: To regain our political dangerousness in the face of the most barbarian social and political system, named capitalism. Such an ambitious goal requires first of all organisation, self-discipline, commitment, consistency and the will to take back the life that they steal from us every day.

Political organisation, crystallising our basic political positions, analysing the situation, creating groups for self-education and mutual aid, creating points of dialogue where dialectics will be a way of effectively resolving our political disagreements-concerns. Because our existential need to revolt against capitalist society cannot on its own cover a choice of conscious enlistment to the cause, if it is not connected dialectically with our political composition in a collective field where it will clearly claim its place in history. It is the moment when agreements are vows of life which shatter excuses and hangups. It is the moment when action crushes any suspicion of a truce.

The organisation of networks of revolutionary violence, which will cultivate the radicalisation of sections of the revolutionary movement, will create direct action cells by propagandising through action, will strike with sharp force persons and structures in the authoritarian edifice based on a wider plan of political destabilisation, will develop bonds of solidarity and mutual aid between them. We are here for each other against our common enemy.

Self-discipline, because in an age where repression and social control have become an unbearable reality, whoever is not aware of the seriousness and effectiveness of the opponent will find themselves faced with unpleasant reality. The development of an illegal political plan does not mean that attack is an end in itself. It means that we select the war of attrition as a battle tactic, it means we protect our sensitive information from the prying eyes of the enemy, it means that the intensity of the attacks must be developed in parallel with defence structures against repression. Defence structures with self-defence countermeasures and safety valves that will allow the networks of revolutionary violence to withstand the pressure of repression.

Commitment and Consistency, because the war against authority is not some occasional hobby but a life choice. Because such a choice may cost the loss of life or freedom of a comrade. Because the promotion of a political plan which aims to clash dynamically with state and capital, requires commitments around organisational and political needs that arise. It requires consistency in the responsibilities that each and every one of us has to take, in order to carry out a political initiative or a specific plan. It requires seriousness, humility and understanding, so as to breathe together new life to the struggle for the abolition of exploitation and oppression.

The creation of this illegal political venture is a collective starting point for struggle. Comrades who participated in groups, cells or individual initiatives of offensive actions decided to create a political formation of revolutionary violence, which will coordinate its action so as to multiply the dynamic of its blows. It will advance the need for organised and coordinated praxis so that our attacks are not fragmentary actions, but direct their dynamic around a tangible strategy, around a political plan of rupture with the system.

Taking into account everything we mentioned, as well as the perspective we believe the struggle should acquire, we created the Direct Action Cells. A tool of the struggle, to raise once more the axe of war against state and capitalism. An organisational association of revolutionary forces which also extends its hand to common struggle with every radical element that agrees with and embraces the political plan and framework that we submit, and operates based on the principles of horizontal organising, solidarity and mutual respect.

Our initiative could not be judged elsewhere but on the very field of revolutionary war. Where thoughts meet actions. Where contemplation meets responsibility. Where an idea finds flesh and blood to breathe. And the time and place could not be another but the warlike confrontation which unfolded on the side of the revolutionary Dimitris Koufontinas during the hunger strike for life and dignity.

We collectively testified publicly that… “you will pay dearly, you will pay for everything”, transporting to the present the words of comrades from our common history. Thus, the first appraisal of the offensive activities of the Cells of Direct Action leaves as a short legacy 20 attacks on central targets and persons of authority in the 2 largest metropolitan centres of the country.

More specifically, we took responsibility for organising, coordinating and carrying out arson attacks in Athens:

- At the Foundation for Economic and Industrial research (Ιδρυμα Οικονομικών και Βιομηχανικών Ερευνών - IOBE) in Koukaki
- At the 13th Public Economic Agency office (ΙΓ’ ΔΟΥ) in the area of Kypseli
- At the residence of the executive of the General Secretariat for the Coordination of Governmental Work of the New Democracy Party (Γενική Γραμματεία Συντονισμού Κυβερνητικού Έργου της ΝΔ), Stratos Mavroidakos, in Ilion
- On a cop’s vehicle, in the area of Petralona
- At the residence of the retired Lieutenant General of the Hellenic Police, Christos Kontaridis
- At the residence of the Brigadier General of the Hellenic Police, Michalis Ladomenos
- At the residence of Giannis Katsiamakas, president of the Panhellenic Federation of Athens Officers (Πανελλήνια Ομοσπονδία Αξιωματικών Αθηνών - ΠΟΑΞΙΑ) and retired Lieutenant General of the Hellenic Police, in Vyronas
- At the residence and vehicle of Katerina Magga, Sergeant of the Patisia Police Station, in Ano Patisia.

And in Thessaloniki:

- At the offices of the Hellenic-American Union, in Vardaris
On a vehicle of the Ministry of Labour, on Mitropoleos Street

At the military residences opposite NATO Headquarters, in the Evzoni area

What is our political plan, which we are publicly presenting to the wider anticapitalist-anarchist movement, so that it can support the plan and align itself within the interior of the Direct Action Cells? A political plan which will unfold, will create cracks, raise questions and return to our political reality the saying that if the revolutionary movement does not succeed in standing on its own two feet to walk the path that it will determine, it is doomed to fail. A political plan which will analyse the contemporary stakes, not with the intention of simply imprinting them on the social and political map, but wanting to throw itself in the fire of battle by undermining the normality which the class enemy imposes. The first aims of the Direct Action Cells are:

1. To be a tool for struggle which will channel the potential of any groups or individuals that will enlist to participate on the basis of a specific strategy of struggle that we choose to promote. This strategy can be either the field of an internal dialogue which develops inside the Cells and results in political agreement, or a comprehensive political proposal submitted by a group of comrades who choose, while maintaining their political and organisational autonomy, to propose the development of a specific political direction for the struggle.

2. To be a visible expression of the radical shift of a section of the anarchist movement which we want over time to become larger and larger, in terms of fighting power and not only numerical concentration, more and more uncontrollable, more and more effective in its choices and strategies. We want this radical shift, as described above, to act as a trigger for mobilisation and counterattack. To fuel with will, unity and faith the rebirth of struggle in the face of division and fragmentation.

3. To bring back to the people of the struggle the logic of direct confrontation with state and capital. The notion that interprets dialectically our belief in the revolutionary cause and the formulation of specific strategies of struggle which, to the extent that they are developed in healthy and comradely political terms, come into conflict with the node of the political and economic plans of state and capital. To bring back the word Revolution to the forefront of the movement without diminishing the targeting, the vision and the flame of the insurrectionary perspective, because right now it might seem unrealistic to some. It is a different thing for a targeted, socially grounded political approach to take place (something we seek), and it is another thing to withdraw from basic and fundamental values of the anti-state and anarchist struggle. On the other hand, it is precisely this finding and proposition that must emerge from dialectical fermentation, thought and determination, in order to realise all those small or big moments of fire and attack that elevate it and give it its essential meaning.

4. To not leave anyone facing the enemy alone. Solidarity must know no borders. We fight united with every struggling part of society, with each and every person who expresses their hatred for any system of authority and acts in the direction of overthrowing the existent. We seek to spread the revolutionary networks of resistance, overcoming all limits and restrictions, whether they are prison walls or barbed wire. We set the conditions of our lives as we want, against any oppressor who will feel our threatening existence. Always with every militant prisoner, with every persecuted and wanted person who fights, insurrects, rebels against the hellish penitentiaries and judiciary authority. Let us create those bulwarks to state and capitalist rage, throwing ourselves into the affair of the spreading of struggle.

Comrades, we invite you to our side to strengthen the gaze that looks straight at the enemy. To collectively assume the political responsibility - and the historical burden behind it - that will escalate the militant confrontation with every power. With base organisation and unity in practice, we fuel revolutionary dialogue through offensive propaganda, coordinating our forces and continuing the struggle. Comrades in battle, we call you to create new Direct Action Cells.

“...There are more and more people resisting around the world. For those of us who persist in fighting for the future, having experienced defeat may be an advantage. We have lived through the exhaustion, the death of an upsurge. Today, we are seeing and living the budding new life behind that phase. These situations where the invisible recreate the consciousness of being the only creative multitude, they reinvent our ability to function while asking questions…”
