For the murder of Nahel: The rage is overflowing

In Paris, in the suburb of Nader, on the morning of 27 June, 2023 another 17-year-old Frenchman of Algerian origin, Nahel, is murdered at close range in his car by a cop. The official narrative would be failure to comply with a control and defending the cop on duty. But the existence of a video from a bystander left no room for the parrots in the system to once again unleash their racist guttering about a dangerous criminal.

Not of course that they do not attempt this through the voices of the media, the interior minister or the “independent citizens” who give the necessary social legitimacy to the escalation of repressive brutality and nationalist politics.

The violence, racism, humiliation and killings by the cops especially towards the residents of the working class, poor and coloured neighbourhoods of Paris are daily and normalised.

The state assassination was immediately responded to with wild clashes in the streets, which have been going on for days now. The streets of many cities in France are filled with the anger of the demonstrators returning home with little violence. Burning of state buildings, armed attacks on cops and vehicles are the reality of the last few nights, despite the curfews. The state’s response: brutal repression, arrests, chemicals, plastic bullets. Nothing surprises us anymore. The police are loyal to the state and are ready to kill to defend their bosses. The murder of Nahel is not an isolated incident, it is not a ‘pathogenesis’ of France, it is the tangible expression of the racist state, the nationalist social imaginary and the entrenched sexism in all corners of the globe.

No matter how many kilometres separate us on the map, our hearts burn with those who fight for the ultimate dignity, to walk freely.

Our hearts clench into a fist sending a tiny signal of solidarity.
Everybody to the streets...

State, cops, judges, bosses are murderers.

Let's not let another murder slip through the cracks.

In memory of Nahel and all those who have perished too soon.

Île-de-France, France: Riot rage spreads following police assassination of Nahel

Scenes of riots, mortars and fires marked the night from Tuesday to Wednesday in the department of Hauts-de-Seine, but also more sporadically in other departments of Île-de-France after the death of Nahel, 17 years old. The teenager was killed on Tuesday morning 27th June in Nanterre (Hauts-de-Seine) by a police shooting [at point-blank range in the chest], the latter justifying his act by a refusal to comply. The policeman responsible for the fatal shooting, aged 38 years, is being questioned by the General Inspectorate of the National Police (IGPN) as part of the investigation for intentional homicide opened by the Nanterre prosecutor's office.

In addition to the 31 arrests during this first night of riots, the Minister of the Interior Gérald Darmanin speaks of « 24 police wounded » and of « about forty vehicles burnt ». Today Wednesday 28th June, 2,000 police and gendarmes will be deployed in Paris and its inner suburbs.

A Nanterre même, Urban violence has been concentrated in the neighbourhoods of Vieux pont where Nahel was from, but also tion on Sunday, July 2, 210 schools suffered fires and damage (bin fires, destruction or attempted break-ins). Classrooms of course, but also teachers' rooms and administrative offices have been damaged or even completely destroyed. With "some sixty establishments that have suffered significant damage, of which a dozen have been destroyed or partially destroyed," declared the Minister of national education

[Updated with the figures of the Ministry of Justice, Tuesday, July 4 at 8 pm, and those given by the Minister of the Interior during his hearing in the Senate on July 5 afternoon.]

Zilina, Berthelot, Pablo Picasso and Damades. The police were targeted by projectiles, fireworks mortars and sometimes Molotov cocktails. Approximately vehicles and garbage cans – often erected as barricades – were destroyed in the municipality. Fires were also lit along the rails of the RER A, between Nanterre and Rueil-Malmaison. Several administrative buildings (Public finances, community centre, two school groups) were also damaged by fires. « Various public and private buildings, among which some schools, have suffered significant and unacceptable degradation, sometimes irreparable », the mayor Patrick Jarry laments.

On the side of the authorities, 20 police were slightly injured, among which 18 CRS and two BAC officers of Gennevilliers. Ten police vehicles and a fire engine of the Paris fire brigade (BSPP) were also damaged.

Nanterre (92), le 28 juin 2023

Hauts-de-Seine. Urban violence spread tonight in the Hauts-de-Seine. Cars, wheels and garbage cans were burnt in Asnières, Clichy, Colombes, Gennevilliers, Villeneuve-la-Garenne, Rueil-Malmaison, Suresnes, Boulogne-Billancourt, Bourg-la-Reine, Clamart, Montrouge, Bagneux, Vanves, and Malakoff. In the municipalities where the clashes were the hardest, the security forces used tear gas canisters and rubber bullets.

Yvelines. The first clashes were reported around midnight, at Mantes-la-Jolie. They spread like wildfire to Sartrouville, Andrézy, Trappes, Les Mureaux, Limay, Poissy, Coignières, Bougival, Montigny-le-Bretonneux, Conflans-Sainte-Honorine, Chanteloup-les-Vignes, La Verrière.

In most cases, these were garbage can fires and projectiles launched. At Meulan-en-Yvelines, the community centre located on Allée des Marguerites was set on fire around 3:10 a.m. The entire ground floor was hit: people would have broken a window before throwing a Molotov-type device inside. On the same night, a fire was started on the back façade of the supermarket Sitis Market, located a few hundred metres away, without causing too much damage.

At Mantes-la-Jolie, the town hall annex of Val-Fourré was set on fire and significant damage was caused. According to several reports, a group of young teenagers forced their way into the building around 12:30 a.m., before setting fire to pallets in the main lobby. Essonne. Seven vehicles and garbage containers were set on fire in Athis-Mons. Aux Ulis, A police station was damaged and two police cars burned. Garbage cans and burning vehicles were also struck at Courcouronnes, Corbeil-Essonnes, Massy, Evry, Etampes, Epinay-sur-Orge and Juvisy-sur-Orge.

According to Geoffroy Roux de Bézieux, president of the Medef, the employers' federation, the damage to companies is in the order of 1 billion euros. The insurers report an initial invoice of 280 million euros, with the first 5800 claims received. By comparison, after several weeks of riots in 2005, the bill for insurers was $204 million. And this is just the beginning of the assessments—

In the Ile-de-France region, a total of 39 buses and a T6 tram train have been burned since 28 June, with an estimated total of at least •20 million in damage to public transport in the region. Bus depots were burned in Aubervilliers, Provins, Evry, Blanc-Mesnil, Dugny or Savigny-sur-Orge. Ten tram stations were destroyed on lines T5, T6, T8 and T9 with damage to the tune of of 2 million euros.

Finally, “of the 500 cities that have priority neighbourhoods (QPV), more than 150 have not experienced clashes and about 50 towns that do not have the political districts of the city have experienced clashes,” the Interior Minister reported in the Senate on July 5. And according to the tallies drawn up by the ministry of national Educa-

Today's Figures on the Riots

In total, between the night of June 27 to 28 and July 2 to 3, there were officially 12 031 vehicles burned, 2 508 buildings burned down or damaged, including 273 police and gendarmerie premises, 105 town halls burnt or damaged, 168 schools were attacked. 722 law enforcement personnel were injured.

3,625 people were taken into custody throughout the territory (1,124 of whom are minors). Among all those arrested, « the average age is between 17 and 18 (...) the youngest is 11 years old and the oldest 59 years old, one third are minors », “60% of the total have no criminal record”, «10% of the people arrested are non-French and there have been 40 placements in administrative detention centres» according to the Minister of Interior. Of the detained persons, 990 of the age of majority and 253 minors were referred to the prosecutor's office, and 480 of the age of majority were referred to the court for immediate appearance. To date, 380 people have been sent to prison, whether they have been sentenced or placed in pre-trial detention pending trial.

On the damage side, the Association des Maires de France [Federation of Mayors] (AMF) reports “150 town halls or municipal buildings attacked since Tuesday, a first in the country's history”. And the Minister for Small and Medium Enterprises, Trade, Crafts and Tourism, announced that 436 tobacconists have been affected since the beginning of the riots, three-quarters of them have been looted and 10% have been completely destroyed.

In addition, about 370 bank branches have been vandalized in recent days, 80 of which were destroyed or set on fire, according to the French Banking Federation (FBF). Of the 7,000 post offices in the country, 80 were unable to reopen due to destruction, 150 were “impacted” and 80 La Banque Postale ATMs were destroyed.

Mantes-la-Jolie (Yvelines), night of Tuesday to Wednesday 28 June 2023 : the town hall annex of the Val-Fourré district is reduced to ashes during the night.

Seine-Saint-Denis. Tensions also spread in Seine-Saint-Denis, in particular to Saint-Denis et Montfermeil. In the department, the police responded with more than 46 shots of rubber bullets (LBD) during the interventions.

Val d'Oise. One person was arrested in Argenteuil, in Val-d'Oise, suspected of damaging a municipal police car. Barricades were set up during the night, and mortars fired. Garbage bin fires also occurred in Cergy, in Deuil-la-Barre, Sarcelles, Saint-Gratien, Eragny.

A little further afield. In addition to some neighbourhoods in the Paris region, tensions were also noted elsewhere in France. In Bordeaux notably, in the Aubiers district, as well as in the Cité du Midi in Floirac and the priority Génicar neighbourhood in Lormont. Cars and bins were set alight.

In Dijon, Several dozen people confronted the police between 2am and 5am in the Grésilles neighbourhood. Projectiles and Molotov cocktails were thrown at the police who responded with tear gas, as well as in Roubaix and Hem (North) or Colmar (Haut-Rhin).

Every cop is a potential danger.

Non-white people in a white society are much more often affected by deadly police violence than white people. But socially excluded, drug addicted, mentally ill, or people who are not from the right or middle class spectrum feel police violence more often.

We find ourselves in eternal hatred together with other hood-wearing people on the streets and squares of revolts.

So that the fear changes sides.

Hamburg, Germany: For Nahel and all the others.

Private car of cop set on fire

A reformist view of the police as an organ of power is not only naive but also dangerous. Continuous killings by the pigs in uniform are proof that neither internal anti-racist programs nor public debate are able to keep the trigger-happy monsters in check and prevent the next murder. When we hear about the execution of a 19 year old who was riddled with 34 bullets by several cops and miraculously survived paraplegic, our hatred once again rises to immeasurable levels and we have to do something.

Let them be afraid on their patrols through the neighborhoods of the marginalized. They should be afraid at their desks when they arrogantly look at the human filth outside their windows. They are supposed to be afraid when they lie in their little beds at night dreaming of action against evil.

Being a cop is a conscious choice. They hear about the murders and the methods of oppression. They know about it and still apply to the police.

They should be sure of our contempt.

In joyful hatred and with the energy that the revolt in France gives us, we set fire to the private car of a cop pig in Eimsbüttel in the night of 12.7.23

We join in the action against power with the anti-authoritarians and angry revolvers in France. The pigs killed Nahel M. in Nanterre. The cop who took Nahel's life and caused his family endless grief did it because he felt he had the right to do so. His uniform and his training gave him permission. This pig identifies so much with his disgusting profession that he decides for himself whose life has value and whose does not.

Everywhere : 2nd night of riotous rage following the police assassination of Nahel 29/06/2023

This second night of riot in a row after that of yesterday following the police assassination of Nahel (Hauts-de-Seine) on 27th June, expanded to many more cities, multiplying also the number and type of targets.. Beyond clashes with police and burnt cars, below is a non-exhaustive review of burned buildings, looted or attacked across the country, from cop stations to town halls, from social centres to media libraries, from supermarkets to metro stations and trams, not forgetting the entrance of the prison of Fresnes or the court of Asnières-sur-Seine...]

Some numbers

2377 fires were recorded on the public road during the night of 28 to 29 June, according to a police source cited by Le Parisien. Of these, 609 vehicles and 114 buildings were affect. 27 attacks on national police premises were also reported (among which 7 by fire), 4 gendarmerie barracks, 14 municipal police stations (including 10 burnt). At least eight town halls burned or damaged, 6 schools and six public buildings. 133 members of the police forces were injured, including 123 policemen and 10 gendarmes.

For pleasure...

* Airparif writes this Thursday that « significant levels of particulate matter (PM10 + PM2.5) were observed in the air tonight and this morning » in Île-de-France, and that this « increase in the region is mainly related to emissions related to riots». This kind of pollution can be due to the many fires that took place at night.

Claim for the barrage of incendiary attacks by “Nael M.” Incendiary Initiative (City of Patras ,Greece)

In the early morning hours of Friday 30/06/23 we carried out incendiary attacks on vans belonging to the companies “Kotsovolos” and “Ena”. Companies like these and many other capitalist companies are pillars of the capitalist system.

We dedicate these actions to the memory of the 17 year old Nael M. murdered by the French state and to the rebels of France.

Public transport in Ile-de-France

Two trams were burned in the Hauts-de-Seine. One of line T6 to Clamart, at the Georges Pompidou stop. « The catenaries burned, the tram is embedded in the tracks. We're going to disengage the train this afternoon (Thursday) but the work will take weeks», explained a manager. The other train that was set on fire was the T10 tram, which had just been inaugurated last Saturday at Châtenay-Malabry.

In addition, 11 buses were burned in all l'Île-de-France, three of them in Seine-Saint-Denis and at Viry-Chatillon, at the Fournil junction. « About 15 people got on the bus, took everyone out and then set the vehicle on fire», relates the mayor. Then they went into the street to set fire to several garbage cans».

A small fire for solidarity/ un petit feu au soutien (Berlin,Germany)

Following the call for practical support for the fights in France this weekend, we decided to do what we could here and placed a small fire starter under a miles sharing car in the night of the 14th to the 15th of July as a salute to our French comrades. Suivre l'appel au soutien pratique pour France ce week-end, nous avons décidé de faire ce que nous pouvions ici et avons placé un petit allume-feu sous une voiture de Miles dans la nuit du 14 au 15 juillet en guise de salut à nos camarades français.

Following the call for practical support for the fights in France this weekend, we decided to do what we could here and placed a small fire starter under a miles sharing car that was left waiting in Columbiadamm in the night of the 14th to the 15th of July as a salute to our French comrades.

A sharing car went up in flames that would have only have been used by those who can afford more than public transport anyway, those who don't have to sit in sticky subways and cramped buses. But it's our anger that's rising. Our anger at the racist government and police, the widening economic gap, the ecological disaster accelerated by the greed of the rich, it's only a matter of time before we take to the streets to protest the whole shit here too.

Until then we're the creatures hanging out in the streets, lurking in the dark to disrupt the steady flow of the bustling city a little, hoping that others will join them and that we'll create ever more resistance to show them that they can be everywhere at once, and that we know how to use it.

country and the apparent electoral recording of the prevalence of the field of reaction, the class war is raging and its final outcome is still fluid and undefined, to the extent that the social factor, the proletariat and the young perceive their real power and transform it into militant and organisationally upgraded resistance and insurrectional perspective. It is social inequalities themselves, the destruction of conquests, poverty and the housing issue, the death-politics that make this perspective in the present increasingly imperative in all corners of the world in order to shake the omnipotence of the capitalist system and its enormous contradictions.

In any case, it is obvious that in the generalised condition of the sharpening of the conditions of poverty, impoverishment and repression, the restriction of any social, labour and political rights for millions of people within the western world and in the even more visible condition of the outbreak of a generalised war between the imperialist poles that are already in conflict worldwide today, the class conflict will be increasingly transferred to the “safe” rear of the capitalist world and the armies of the damned that it creates will be the raw material for its ignition.

From the French ghettos to the great avenues of the western metropolises and from the modern labour sweatshops of class exploitation to the watery graves of the Mediterranean and the warehouses of human souls that surround iron-barred fortress Europe, it is an internationalist task for the working class to organise its total counter-attack against the ever-emerging policy of its gradual annihilation. For the building of tomorrow’s unimpeded avenues of social justice, human freedom and equality, the total demolition of this rotten world is necessary. Until then, the small and great victories and defeats of the proletariat, the class conflicts, the social uprisings will remind us of the obvious: The only answer to state violence and capitalist barbarism is none other than mass, organised, social-class resistance and counter-attack.

as a result they ran and “calmly” hid behind the cage, in the words of their president.

Our action is dedicated to 17-year-old Nahel Merzouk who was murdered in cold blood on June 27 by the uniformed dogs of the French state and the other boy murdered in the social uprising that is shaking France. It is also a signal of internationalist solidarity with our class brothers and sisters who are rebelling in France and experiencing the violence of the state.

A social uprising that has spread all the previous days in the suburbs of the French capital and in all major cities with clashes with the state murderers, burning barricades, arson of state and capitalist buildings, vehicles, etc.

A social uprising that took inspiration from the emblematic uprising of the French ghettos of November 2005 (when again two young people lost their lives due to the murderous action of the police), looked in the eye and connected with the recent great mobilisations of French workers against the Macron pension reform, carrying through it the older movements of French society such as the yellow vests, the mobilisations of students, workers and unemployed, the militant strike mobilisations against the general restructuring of the French economy.

A social uprising that makes visible the depth of social contradictions within modern capitalist metropolises. The French youth of the suburbs, after being systematically marginalised by the French state's ghettoisation policies regarding immigrants from its colonies, both socially and at the work and cultural level, they are now murdered by the institutional exponents of this treaty as the ultimate result of the racist and violent behaviour that exists on a daily basis.

A social uprising that acquires a global dimension because it confirms that, regardless of the existing socio-class correlations in one

In Bordeaux itself, several infrastructures have been degraded, including the Aubiers and Grand Parc tram stations as well as the nearby bus stops and the Aubiers relay parking. Street furniture was also hit and garbage can fires lit in the La Benauge district, on the right bank of Bordeaux.

Concerning the relais-parking-relais of Aubiers, « the reception lodge was set on fire and major damage done to the operating equipment », announced Keolis. The relais-parking Aubiers « is now closed for an interminable period of time, while appraisals and repairs are carried out ».

Nord

The President of the Department deplores the long list of public buildings and private property destroyed in this city: « It is with shock and emotion that we note, this Thursday, the damage of a night of extreme violence in several neighbourhoods of Amiens.

Several public buildings were the target of arson: the North Atrium area town hall, the youth entertainment centre L'Odysée, part of the Nautilus swimming pool, the gymnasium that housed the French boxing club or the future West media library, important project for the Etouvie district, which was about to be built. Businesses have been degraded. Several vehicles, buses, cars, and the premises of Synapse 3I, an integration association supported by the Somme County Council, were also burned down. » Two buses were also set on fire, one of which was still smoking near Place du Colvert on Thursday morning.

Wattrelos (North), night of 28 to 29 June: the Mousserie social centre closes its doors for good.

In the North, the public facilities of Wattrelos were particularly targeted by the rioters, on the night of Wednesday to Thursday. The first point of tension was the social centre of the Mousserie, closed since the beginning of the year due to cracks. It was completely ravaged by the flames. While the firefighters were fighting the fire, around 3:00 a.m., they were taken to task by a gang of young people, who threw projectiles at them and targeted them and their vehicles with fireworks mortars.

In Marseille (Bouches-du-Rhône). On Saturday, 1 July, several hundred young rioters harassed the large police force deployed in the city centre. A gendarmerie helicopter is constantly flying over the neighbourhood. Repelled by the police from the Canebière, some groups of rioters arrived in the square around 10 pm. Bin fires, tear gas, arrests of three men trying to rob a tobacconists. At 11 pm, several groups try to attack the shopping centres of Grand Littoral (where a Cash Converters is looted) and Merlan in the North and Bonneveine districts, all the south.

On the night of 1 to 2 July between midnight and 1 a.m., a Volkswagen dealership is attacked in the Arnavaux district (north), where 38 cars (mainly new, with no license plate) are stolen after the gate has been destroyed with the ram car. For their part, the police were then mainly focused on the kids at the other end of the city (La Canebière and towards the Old Port), and not in the northern districts. They arrived later, like the cavalry, around 2:00 in the morning.

The losses for traders in the Aix-Marseille region are estimated by insurers to be “more than one hundred million euros”, according to Jean-Luc Chauvin, president of the CCI Aix-Marseille-Provence. In Marseille alone in recent days, “almost 400 shops” have been vandalised, “some in the city centre but also in shopping centres.”

Aix-en-Provence (Bouches-du-Rhône), night of 1 to 2 July: fire to the House of Justice and Law [legal advice centre]

Moissac (Tarn-et-Garonne), night of July 1 to 2: the vehicles of the town hall – including those of its police – burn under the stars

In Moissac (Tarn-et-Garonne), around 3:30 am on the night of July 1 to 2, vehicles parked behind the high metal gate giving access to the municipal parking near the town hall are set on fire: three belonged to the municipal police and are completely destroyed.

In Albi (Tarn), the door of the Tarn prefecture is set on fire by rioters the night of July 1 to 2.

In Aix-en-Provence (Bouches-du-Rhône), in the Jas-de-Buffan district, the House of Justice and Law [legal advice centre] is set on fire during the night of July 1 to 2 shortly after midnight. Several rioters broke into the premises and set fire to the meeting room and reception. Others tried in vain to force the door of the adjoining town hall of the neighbourhood.

Wattrelos (Nord), night from 28 to 29 June : looting of Lidl which was then set on fire.

After this aborted intervention, the displacement of the soldiers of the fire was then calculated in hundreds of metres: a few steps, the Lidl store, boulevard des Couteaux, was completely destroyed by the flames, not without having been looted beforehand. Around 4 a.m., firefighters (from all over Lille) were still trying to put out the fire on two large ladders. From this hard-discount store, inaugurated in 2016 on the road linking Wattrelos to Tourcoing, there is nothing left but a pile of sheet metal and melted glass.

Another Lidl supermarket in Roubaix was looted. Two adjoining town halls were sacked in Roubaix. In Tourcoing, a school was set on fire, banks were targeted.

In Mons-en-Barœul (Nord), several public buildings, including the city hall, were set ablaze. Around 11 p.m., a large number of individuals attacked the the dance hall of the city hall. The damage is considerable according to Mayor Rudy Elegeest: They smashed the windows, broke down the doors. In the town hall, I had municipal police officers there. They had to take refuge, hide from becoming a victim of these acts. Around 12:30, we managed to get the officers, who had been very brave, out of the burning building. » Also according to the mayor of the municipality, the individuals left the place by shooting a final bunch of fireworks mortars.

Finally, in Lille, the entrance to the metro station (Porte de Douai) was set on fire. The damage is very significant and “the extent of the repair work is being assessed,” says Ilévia, who says the station will remain temporarily closed.

The municipal police station on Rue Frédéric-Mottez is also one of the damaged buildings. A window was broken. On social media, a video shows a group of individuals breaking it and then launching a burning object into the building.

Centre/Rhône-Alpes

The city of Limoges (Haute-Vienne) was not spared violence and degradation during the night of Wednesday to Thursday. The Beaubreuil neighbourhood’s town hall was attacked with Molotov cocktails. The premises burned to the ground. Numerous fires have occurred in several areas of the city. An empty school bus parked in the Renoir High School area was also targeted.

Décines-Charpieu (Rhônes), night of 28 to 29 June: town hall was hot.

In Montluçon (Allier), the night of Saturday 1st to Sunday 2nd July.

An elected official finished the evening in accident and emergency. He was hit in the head by a stone thrown by the rioters at a delegation of elected officials who tried to intervene.

In the district of Ville-Gozet, about forty rioters attacked several stores, whose home help brand Solutia paid the price by ending up on fire. The rioters then took the direction of the Saint-Jacques 2 shopping centre. After breaking the windows of Intersport, they managed to enter the store, looting it. Darty’s windows were also damaged, but the rioters couldn’t get in.

Orléans (Loire), in the Argonne district, three vans of the association Orléans insertion emploi [employment integration] (OIE, 135 employees) go up in smoke in their parking lot on the night of July 2 to 3.

Blois (Loir-et-Cher), on the night of 1 to 2 July between 2.30 am and 3 am, a bin is set alight in Place Lorjou in an institutional building, under the stairwell near the rear entrance of the building. This houses the House of Justice and Law, the Departmental Union of Family Associations (UDAF) or France victims. Although the fire was extinguished, all the ground and walls are covered with soot, bringing this beautiful world to a stop.

 Essonne

Viry-Chatillon (Essonne), early evening of June 28

One of the first events recorded on Wednesday evening is the burning of a bus, place de la Treille in Viry-Chatillon. Filmed and widely shared on social media, the scene took place just a few metres from the place where, in 2016, four policemen had been attacked with Molotov cocktails. Later in the evening and at night, other buses were set on fire, notably in the Hautes-Mardelles district of Brunoy, Évry-Courcouronnes and Grigny. « About 15 people got on the bus, got everyone out and then set the vehicle on fire, the mayor said. Then they went into the street to set fire to several garbage bins. »

In Athis-Mons, a bus was stolen by rioters who then drove it briskly through the streets of the town.

In Vigneux-sur-Seine, individuals fired rifles at a video surveillance camera in the Oly plain district. Rioters also reportedly vandalized and entered the city's McDonald's restaurant, before emptying the tills.

In the prefecture of Évry-Courcouronnes, the damage is significant: the former neighbourhood centre of the now abandoned Parc aux

During the night, shopping centres on the outskirts of the city (Le Merlan, les Terrasses du Port, le Centre Bourse, Grand Littoral) were attacked with varying degrees of success. According to a latest report from the authorities, 95 people were arrested overnight, and 31 cops injured. In addition, a CRS unit arrived as reinforcements during the night, and reinforcements from the gendarmerie were also deployed in Marseille, in support of the police.

The Marseille Espérance association, which brings together spiritual leaders from the various religious communities in Marseille, for its part launched a call for appeasement.

Everywhere: 5th and 6th nights of riotous revolt, it's still burning and looting (5th and 6th) took place this weekend during the night of 1 to 2 and 2 to 3 July, under heavy police pressure (plus that exerted by para-municipal associative structures or citizens).

What marked these fifth and sixth nights of riots, which the State and its mouthpieces presented as much calmer despite the 157 buildings burned or damaged in a short weekend-end, was in particular that – for lack of being able to hold the street sufficiently or carry out abundant looting as on the previous days/nights – we have also seen in the last two days more targeted and fewer attacks. These have included places dedicated to Justice (Court or House of Law – in Créteil, Aix-en-Provence, Blois, Forbach, Villeneuve-sur-Lot), a tennis club of rich people or private property belonging to the mayors. But rest assured, the institutions of local domination (community centre, media library, town hall, school, police) have not been spared either...]

Habitat was burnt down.

Bordeaux (Gironde), evening of June 30

In Bordeaux (Gironde), a rally against police violence took place Place de la Bourse in the early evening, despite the ban on assembly decreed by the prefecture. A procession then marched through the city centre. Trash cans were burned and windows broken, particularly in rue Sainte-Catherine, the main commercial artery of the city.

[Marseille (Bouches-du-Rhône), night of 30th June to 1st July: one of the looted jewellery stores]

In Marseille (Bouches-du-Rhône), After initial clashes in the early evening on the Canebière, the situation quickly became tense. Many stores were looted after being trashed, and the Aldi store in Les Flamants (14th arr.) was set on fire.

After having destroyed a wall and smashing through the window, “five to eight” shotguns were stolen from one of the city’s two armouries, Negrel and Mistral, located rue d’Aubagne, during the riots.

Lièvres was burned down completely, as did the adjoining town hall of the Canal and the neighbourhood centre of Les Épinettes. Elsewhere in the department, the facade of the town hall of Ullis was damaged, as was the facade of an administrative building in Sainte-Geneviève-des-Bois and the offices of the municipal police in Vigneux-sur-Seine. Several police stations, such as those of Évry-Courcouronnes, Ullis, Athis-Mons and Draveil were also targeted during the night.

 Val-d’Oise

Garges-lès-Gonesse (Val d’Oise), night of 28 to 29 June 2023. : the ground floor of the town hall completely ablaze

In Garges-lès-Gonesse, a fire broke out on the ground floor of the town hall, brand new, just before 2 o’clock. An area of 1,000 m2 burned. The intervention, which required two water hoses, took more than 5 hours.

Half an hour earlier, the one in Montmagny was attacked and set on fire. Between forty and sixty people gathered in front of the city hall. The band worked hard to set the building on fire. The entrance doors were broken and incendiary devices launched inside. Individuals also sprayed diesel on the shutters before attempting to set them on fire without much success. But the flames that caught inside caused extensive damage. « The entire entrance to the town hall, the reception and the office of the director general of services were destroyed », lists the mayor (LR) Patrick Floquet.

In Bezons, a vehicle fire spread to the Angela-Davis school. It was basically a metal siding that was destroyed. The school group should be able to function partially. The firemen engaged 4 water lances and fought for 7h25 . The police station suffered an attempted fire, which may have been prevented by law enforcement. The glass facade of the town hall was damaged by numerous blows. A bus was set on fire just in front of it.

Damage was also noted in Argenteuil, where the Val-Notre-Dame neighbourhood centre suffered a fire. Vandalism also affected the town hall and a cultural centre in Montigny-lès-Cormeilles.

In Cergy-Pontoise very varied sites were targeted tonight. Pallets were collected and set on fire in front of the antenna of the police station on rue de l'abondance in Cergy-le-Haut, at the foot of a building. Individuals also attempted to break into the UGC cinema and flames were seen inside the lobby, but the damage caused seems to be limited.

Southern France:

In Nîmes (Gard), the ground floor of the DDTM located near the district Pissevin was destroyed by a fire of over 300m2. Four other buildings were also set on fire, including an opticians, a tobacconist, and a branch of Crédit Agricole bank.

In Montpellier (Hérault), several shops were damaged or looted in the city centre (the Swarovski jewellery store, Orange and Dior) and in the Petit-Bard, Cévennes or Cité Astruc neighbourhoods (tobacconist, Crédit Agricole ATM, etc.). In the Mosson district, the post office was completely burnt down.

In Toulouse (Haute-Garonne), near the Sept-Deniers neighbourhood, a Yamaha motorbike store located at 6 rue Louis Bonin was vandalised by a group of individuals who didn't hesitate to use a stolen backhoe to smash the shop window around 3am, after first destroying the entrance gate to this mini commercial area. Several motorcycles were stolen (and seven people arrested out of around thirty assailants).

In Privas (Ardèche), in the Lancelot district, a truck from Ardèche

Val de Marne:

In L'Haj-les-Roses, the neo-Baltard style market hall inaugurated last year caught fire. Messages on were left for local authorities such as "We have your addresses... we are going to burn you" written on the walls.

* Hauts-de-Seine

The fire of rage spread to the entire department. The second night of violence following the death of Nahel, killed by a policeman, on Tuesday in Nanterre, differed greatly from the day before. If on Tuesday evening the violence was concentrated globally on Nanterre and the northern loop of the department (Asnières, Gennevilliers, Colombes, Villeneuve), this time it was the whole of the Hauts-de-Seine to smell the burning and the tear gas. The main target of the rioters last night was public buildings. From Montrouge to Gennevilliers via Meudon, Suresnes or Clichy, almost no municipality has escaped unscathed. This violence was not limited to the poor areas and sensitive neighbourhoods.

It hit a dozen response vehicles parked outside the building, in a courtyard, and spread to a few offices on the site.

Several police stations were attacked: in Suresnes, Bois-Colombes and Gennevilliers where the thick fire of fireworks sprayed several windows. In Meudon, the municipal police station was targeted, as in Villeneuve-la-Garenne the day before. In Asnières-sur-Seine, the court was set on fire.

In Meudon-la-Forêt, the priority district of Meudon and Châtenay-Malabry, assailants attacked the adjoining town halls. In their anger, the groups of rioters also set fire to construction sites: that of the media library in Clichy where the flames ravaged a part of the foundations and a building machine while in Puteaux, at the border with Nanterre, it's a school that's been burned. In Gennevilliers, a property developer's "bubble" was ravaged on Debussy Street. If looting was not a feature of the night, the Manège à bijoux [Jewellery fair] of one of the Leclerc centres in Colombes was sacked.

The Asnières-sur-Seine court was also set on fire. A security guard was inside the court when about 15 young people set fire to it around 3 a.m. From the ground floor of this nearby court, there is almost nothing left. The flames ravaged everything. This tribunal will need a lot of work before it can reopen its doors, and in the meantime, temporary premises will have to be installed in Colombes.

In the field, the techniques of these small, highly mobile groups have also evolved. More efficient, more focused as evidenced by the presence of many DIY devices designed to puncture the tires of vehicles, starting with those of the police. "They put on the CRS to immobilize them and reduce their ability to move," said an observer in Nanterre.

Seine et Marne:

In Nemours, despite the curfew in effect from 10pm, the Espace cultural centre is totally destroyed by fire. It hosted the La Scala association and the Claude Monet municipal hall.

Val d'Oise:

[Persan (Val d'Oise), night of 30th June to 1st July: the town hall is trashed and set on fire]

In Persan, the town hall was set on fire during the night. The door was totally destroyed and everything was devastated by the flames. It was towards 1.30am that the fire was reported: the building was 80% destroyed and the adjacent police station completely burned down.

In Montreuil, there were many fires, and again a lot of looting. In Croix de Chavaux, the heart of the city, the big Monoprix was looted, as well as a Franprix avenue Gabriel Péri, plus many small shops. Avenue Péri is strewn with debris and barriers of a building site. As part of the city is plunged into darkness, it emphasises even more the intensity of the lights.... The events began late in the evening, with a number of lootings taking place after 1 o'clock in the morning.

In Romainville, in the Trois-Communes district, a scooter store was stormed and looted.

In Saint-Denis, the administrative centre went up in smoke. The building, which is located not far from the town hall, was set on fire around 12.30am. An entire wing was destroyed, including the civil status service.

In Drancy, the Carrefour supermarket and the shopping mall was targetted and thoroughly looted by a group of youths.

* Paris

In the 15th district of Paris, there have been « mortar shootings, garbage fires, cafe terraces vandalized, and video-protection cameras damaged », says Mayor LR Philippe Goujon, who condemns this violence. About 40 young people took action in the Beaugrenelle area between midnight and three o'clock in the morning.

In the Raymond-Queneau sector of the 18th arrondissement, the premises of the Bapsa, the homeless assistance brigade, was set on fire by about 30 people.

Aulnay-sous-Bois, 29 juin 2023. Supermarkets Lidl and Aldi in the north of the town were looted during the night.

On the sidelines of a second night of violence following the death of a teenager in Nanterre (Hauts-de-Seine), killed by a policeman on Tuesday morning following a refusal to comply, several supermarkets in Seine-Saint-Denis but also Yvelines, Seine-et-Marne and Val-de Marne—a Lidl supermarket was looted in Vitry—was the scene of theft and damage in Île-de-France.

As if dazed, the inhabitants of the Rose-des-Vents district in Aulnay-sous-Bois (Seine-Saint-Denis) which inevitably stop in front of the entrance of «their» Aldi this Thursday morning. The door is open, but the store is closed. On the ground, soda cans, bottles of olive oil and various packaging bear witness to the night's looting. A man in shorts walks towards this cluster, picks up a pack of beers and walks away. Inside, a guard observes the scene without flinching.

In Aulnay-sous-Bois, the Lidl near the Europe roundabout, still in the north of the city, was also the victim of looters. « They took everything: robots for 500 euros, clothes, even alcohol », lists a security guard. Around 11 o'clock, police were on site to see the damage.

A few hundred metres away, at the entrance to the Aldi, the confusion led to a dispute of consternation and anger. The atmosphere contrasts with that prevailing a little over a year ago, when the supermarket of the German hard-discount brand opened its doors, nearly two years after the closure of the only large place in the neighbourhood.

In the face of the chaos, a woman explodes her « I'm fed up »: « It's shameful! It's a catastrophe! I am disgusted. » And she vows to “demand to leave” the Rose-des-Vents.

« They've done their shopping »

Who's to blame? While a group of residents take pictures or film the damage at the store's doorstep, a man and a woman engage in conversation. « It is the adults who are responsible the first states. At some point, they have to wake up! » Her interlocutor is offended: Stop talking rubbish! Some parents have authority, others don't. Some children even hit their parents. »

At Trappes (Yvelines), it was the turn of the Carrefour Market to be targeted. The supermarket, situated in the heart of the Merisiers,

Seine Saint Denis:

In Bondy (Seine-Saint-Denis), a hundred or so young guys in hoods had gathered on the bridge over the Canal de l'Ourcq next to of the northern districts of Bondy (Seine-Saint-Denis) with the intention of looting the Conforama located just next door. The target was announced on social networks: “Communiqué for the Bondy people tonight, we're all doing Conforama. Be close and organised and have good logistics. Go tonight for Conforama. Meet at 11.30pm. Spread the word”.

Dozens rushed to the store. Some left with flat screens. Others with boxes impossible to identify. RAID cops made several charges, supported by traditional police units. Amid a barrage of flames, the hooded youths threw stones and tried to push back the police in order to recover more stuff. A RAID team positioned itself in front of the warehouse to block them. Then the RAID started again. The rioters, of all ages, returned loot the store with dozens of cars ready to fill their boots.

Violences en Île-de-France après la mort de Nahel

• Incidents signalés depuis la mort du jeune homme le 27 juin à Nanterre

was not protected by its iron shutter. And dozens of young people have emptied and sacked the shelves of this food store, mainly frequented by families in the neighbourhood. Having come to see the damage this Thursday morning, the store management did not wish to comment. Like the locals, they look at young people whose presence dissuades them from expressing themselves.

In Romainville (Seine-Saint-Denis), a woman in shorts, cigarette in the corner of her mouth, moves away from the Aldi store of Montreuil road shouting: « Who cares about the stuff ? It's a child who is dead, a child! » Behind her, a few passers-by press against the store door, also looted at night. The neighbours say they are « shocked » in the face of this demonstration of violence, broken windows, cardboard boxes spread over the ground. The events took place between 2 and 4 o'clock. Two cars were burnt outside the store.

With a look of dismay, a store employee wanders among the shelves. « A neighbour told me he saw people going out with pampers, stuff like that. They've done their shopping, sighs an old lady from the neighbourhood. But those who work here, they need jobs, it's not easy for them. »

The only store in the devastated neighbourhood

A pensioner also lingers in front of the storefront. Next door neighbour to the discount store, he was awakened in the night and thought of fireworks of young people wanting to have fun. « I had no idea it was war, he said. I don't know what that has to do with Nanterre (looting a store) but good, they take advantage. »

According to several residents, by targeting Aldi, the looters attacked the only store in the neighbourhood. « I'm handicapped, the neighbour continues, pointing to his legs. It was easy for me to get here. Now we have nothing. »

Everywhere : 3rd night of riotous revolt, looting and fires

[Following the police murder of Nahel in Nanterre (Hauts-de-Seine) on Tuesday morning, a first (in english) then a second night of riots (in english) took place all over the country, destructive riots which we have published large illustrated reviews of here.

And finally, a third night from Thursday 29 to Friday 30 June—despite the announced deployment of 40,000 police officers, four times more than the day before, despite the arrival of the RAID (in Toulouse, Lyon, Marseille, Montpellier, Bordeaux, Strasbourg), of the BRI (Nanterre) and the GIGN (in Evry, Savigny le Temple, Nantes, Toulouse, Tours and Avignon) in anti-riot mode, in spite of the night curfews, in spite of the cessation of urban surface transport in the Ile-de-France and elsewhere from 9pm, in spite of the circling of gendarmerie helicopters and police drones, and despite the prefectorial prohibitions of carrying and transporting pyrotechnics as fuel.

Nord

Clashes with law enforcement and looting took place in several towns in Nord-Pas-de-Calais department, in particular in Lens, Maubeuge, Calais, Douai, Béthune, Valenciennes, Plane, Berck-sur-Mer, Boulogne-sur-Mer, Longuenesse, Carvin, Lillers, Sallaumines, Saint-Omer, Aulnoye-Aymeries and Roubaix.

Businesses and a police station were damaged in Lens centre, while two other police stations, in Béthune and Sallaumines, were also damaged, as well as the main door of a police station in Carvin.

In Quiévrechain (Nord), the Action store in the small commercial area Match, avenue Jean-Jaurès, was set on fire around 1.30am.

In Amiens (Somme), where a curfew had been introduced yesterday in certain neighborhoods for unaccompanied children under 16, the médiathèque in the Etouvie neighbourhood was burned down for the second time this week.

In Charleville-Mézières (Ardennes), the LR mayor Boris Ravignon had decided to organise a citizens patrol near nurseries, schools and municipal facilities. In the Ronde-Couture district, he was attacked by a hail of bottles after putting out a bin fire ignited by rioters. The car in which he had to retreat with other elected officials then had the rear window smashed by stones.

In Lens (Pas-de-Calais), it was around 11.30pm that it kicked off in the Grande Résidence neighbourhood. Shortly before midnight, the rioters converged on the police station of Flaubert Tower which they managed to ransack. More disparate groups entered the centre, where businesses were damaged and looted (including one jewelry store). Leaving the station, they then went back up to the town hall which was targeted. This is evidenced by the impacts that riddled the glass facade of the building on Place Jean-Jaurès.

In Gaillon (Eure), it's the second night of rioting in this city with a population of 7000. Over the night of 29th to 30th June, the Renault garage was attacked: after breaking the glass, two exhibition vehicles were taken out to be burned at the entrance to the district, while the dealership itself was in flames, destroying some twenty vehicles parked inside and damaging the seven cars stored outside.

In the night of June 30th to July 1st, after being prevented from looting the Auchan store, the rioters returned at 5am and burned the adjacent McDonald's...

In Evreux (Eure), a hypermarket was looted and a police station targeted by incendiary devices.

In Cholet (Maine-et-Loire), the house of the Les Républicains (LR) mayor (since 1995) who was in the process of moving house, was extensively ransacked and looted overnight.

[Saint-Etienne-du-Rouvray (Normandy), night of 30th June to 1st July, the Picasso college is partially burned down]

In Saint-Etienne-du-Rouvray (Seine-Maritime), the Pablo-Picasso college has been attacked and partly burned. The central kitchen is inoperative. Action and Aldi stores were also looted.

What marked this third night of riots, in addition to clashes with the police across the country, now affecting more than a hundred cities (including small ones), has not only been a fine constancy in burning public transport, but also in multiplying looting of all kinds (sometimes during actual raids in the city centre, but also in Darty, Decathlon or shopping centres), with several destructions of businesses and temples of merchandise. And with a single common language, which goes without any claim or dialogue with power or its mediators: Fire!

Note that today, June 30, the first looting of the day has already begun, such as at the Apple Store and Lacoste in the centre of Strasbourg, the Spar supermarket in Reims or the major shopping centres of Rosny 2 and Créteil Soleil in the Paris region...]

A few figures

The Ministry of the Interior recorded that during the night from 29 to 30 June 79 cop lairs are attacked (39 national police premises, 24 of the municipal police and 16 of the gendarmerie), and 119 public buildings are targeted, including 34 town halls and 28 schools. In addition, 917 people were arrested last night all over France, including 408 in Paris, in Hauts-de-Seine, Seine-Saint-Denis and Val-de-Marne (and 170 in police custody). A total of 249 policemen and gendarmes were injured last night.

Today, June 30, Elisabeth Borne declared from the police station of Evry-Courcouronnes (Essonne) that «all hypotheses», including the establishment of the state of emergency, are envisaged by the executive for «the return of republican order». For its part, the Elysée palace stressed that Emmanuel Macron was ready to adopt the “no taboo” policing system... For a start, the gendarmerie’s 18 new Centaur tanks will be mobilized tonight, and all surface transit across the country has been shut down by the ministry of the interior.

In Coulaines (Sarthe), the town hall was targetted by rioters around 2.30am, who destroyed the sliding doors and the entrance, then threw molotovs inside. The reception, civil status, and the municipal centre of social action were ravaged by the flames. The town hall was not looted: “It is simply an attempt at destruction on the part of brainless thugs,” said mayor Christophe Rouillon, upset at this “sort of unacceptable desecration.”.

In Angers (Maine-et-Loire), in the Monplaisir area the police station was attacked by rioters during the night and totally burnt down, shops were looted; the Tom-Pouce crèche, the Solidarity House and a dozen cars were set on fire, while a council building and job centre were damaged.

In Le Mans (Sarthe), a hundred rioters damaged vehicles and looted several stores in the city centre.

In La Roche-sur-Yon (Vendée), a fire began at a police station

[Gaillon (Eure), night of 30th June to 1st July: the large Renault dealership fire]

In Brest (Finistère), the Kerourien social centre, which includes the premises of Brest Métropole Habitat, was set on fire. The town hall annex and the Bellevue police station were damaged, while the KFC in the area of Carrefour Iroise was burnt down.

In Niort (Deux-Sèvres), around ten social landlord offices of Deux-Sèvres Habitat were ransacked, computers were destroyed and office furniture was smashed. The rioters broke down the doors and windows on the ground floor to get in. The agency will be closed until further notice.

In Nantes (Loire-Atlantique), in the Boissière district, a fire ravaged the annex of the town hall for a second time – having already been licked by flames the previous day – thereby finishing the job.

In Saint-Nazaire (Loire-Atlantique), several shops in the Blue Ribbon shopping mall were looted, as was McDonalds located in the Océanis shopping centre.

[Nantes (Loire-Atlantique), night of 30th June to 1st July: the fate of the town hall annex of the district of Boissière is definitively settled]

The vital prognosis of a committed demonstrator in Lorraine

A member of the RAID deployed in Mont-Saint-Marin (Lorraine), common border with Luxembourg

Regarding the figures, « We arrested 917 rioters yesterday. Their average age is 17 years, a third are minors. We even arrested 13-year-old children, » said the Interior Minister. A man was seriously injured in Mont-Saint-Martin (Meurthe-et-Moselle) on the night of Thursday to Friday, and in conditions that remain to be clarified. On Friday, L'Est Républicain made the connection between this injury and a flash-ball (LBD) shot by a member of a RAID unit deployed on the scene. At the request of Le Monde, the prosecutor of Val-de-Briey, Catherine Galen, reports that « elements have made it possible to seize the IGPN [general inspection of the national police], which has been investigating these facts since this morning ».

“As the flagrance investigation progresses, an LBD shot by the RAID is neither confirmed nor invalidated,” the magistrate added, adding that “the young man’s state of health remains worrying.” According to L’Est Républicain, the young man’s prognosis was «committed». According to the local daily, he was “evacuated from the riots and taken to hospital in Arlon, Belgium.”

Montargis (Loiret), night of June 29 to 30: about one hundred rioters attack the city centre, loot the shops and set fire to

Montargis (Loiret), night of June 29 to 30: the town hall was not spared either

In Montargis (Loiret), shortly before midnight, an imposing group of about a hundred rioters headed towards the centre of Montargis and its shopping street: Rue Dorée. There, the windows of the stores were smashed, the Mirabeau pharmacy and shops were looted and burned. Mayor Benoit Digeon, draws an initial assessment: « In the hyper city centre, about 21 windows completely broken and more than 50 severely damaged. 10 vehicles burned and more than 50 damaged. Three apartment buildings are destroyed and a fourth on fire and contamination via the roof.” The town hall was attacked and is “badly damaged” by nearly 300 rioters according to the mayor. «The city is burning in its centre I am very worried» adds Benoit Digeon.

In Limoges (Haute-Vienne), the police station of La Bastide was set on fire. The antenna-town hall of the Beaubreuil district was also completely burned. In addition, the truck of a lorry driver was stolen before being set on fire, this time at the Zup du Val de l'Aurence

Everywhere: 4th night of riotous revolt, it's still burning and looting

What marked this fourth night of riots, in addition to clashes with the police around the country, was new cities joining the fight (small or medium -sized), the beginnings of the use or theft of fire-arms (Lyon, Marseille), and looting for which hundreds of youths have been able to show up (including in the day or early evening: according to the Minister of Finance, the summary so far is that 200 large retail stores were attacked and looted, along with 250 tobacconists (newsagents), 250 banks, and a dozen shopping centres — 700 in all).

Regarding the targets – which we concentrate more willingly, while the journo-cops filter them more – it remains everything that embodies local state and institutional domination (from town halls to schools, socio-cultural centres, social landlords, or the post of-fice) which were most burnt this night.

for appeasement: We share the pain of Nahel's family and pray for them, especially her mother. We hear the suffering and anger that is expressed... We also say with one voice that violence is never a good path. We strongly deplore the destruction of schools, shops, town halls, means of transport... The people, families and children in these neighbourhoods are the first to suffer the consequences." Today, more than ever, may all believers be servants of peace and the common good. We are all together available to contribute."

"Wave of cancellations" in hotels

The main employers' federation of the hotel and restaurant industry, UMIH, reported on Friday 30th June, that French hoteliers were "experiencing a wave of cancellations of their reservations" in the areas affected by the violence triggered by the death of Nahel M., shot by a policeman in the Paris area.

The president of the UMIH, chef Thierry Marx, deplores in a statement;

"Several cities in France are experiencing very strong tensions, which translate into violence. The inventory every morning made by our presidents of the UMIH in the departments, alarm me about attacks, looting and destruction of shops, including some restaurants and their terraces... Our hotel members are experiencing a wave of cancellations of their reservations in all the territories affected by the degradation and clashes"

In Dijon (Côte d'Or), it was around 10 pm that the first burning vehicles were found in the Fontaine d'Ouche district. Two buses of the operator Divia Mobilités were set on fire in the Grésilles district, avenue Champollion, around one o'clock in the morning.

In Sens (Yonne), the construction site of the building of the future community centre under construction which was to house a crèche next year and the adjoining town hall was set on fire in the Champs-Plaisants district. The rehabilitation of the Champs-Plaisants district was an important project for the city of Sens, a transformation costing 4.3 million euros. The mayor, former first deputy in charge of the districts, expresses his disgust.

In Joigny (Yonne), a Mobigo bus was set on fire in the parking lot of the Lycée Louis-Davier. In Reims (Marne), the police station of the Red Cross district was looted and set on fire, causing the theft of clothing silkscreened «Police Nationale». The police school located a few steps from the police station was also sacked by mortar fire. A fire of two trams was brought under control. Shops and public buildings were also attacked in the city, including a bank branch, a post office, a press building.

In Troyes (Aube), around 3am the Senardes neighbourhood house was totally destroyed by the fires lit during the night. This municipal structure inaugurated in 2018 had cost 2 million euros. «City officials are very shocked. We brought them together at the CMAS (municipal social action centre) this morning (Friday) to look after them, to support them. Some were in tears. It was the instrument of their work that has been destroyed,» says Marc Bret, deputy mayor for social affairs.

The Marcel-Pagnol school group was also targeted by the rioters. Windows were broken by flying objects. The surveillance camera in the square was set on fire, destroying the school fence at the same time.

In Belfort (Burgundy Franche-Comté), a communal building of several hundred m² was destroyed by arson, around 2:30 am near the Coubertin stadium. The building was used by the Belfort Green Space Service to store equipment: 6 vehicles were destroyed.
